TEN HURT WHEN CROWDED CARS HIT AT CROSSING

Trolleys Collide at Corner of Jefferson and Lafayette Avenues.

THREE UNDER FENDER

One Man So Badly Injured He May Die—Many See Accident.

THROWN OFF PLATFORM

Passengers Standing Outside Were the Only Ones Seriously Hurt.

Ten passengers, one a young woman, were injured, one possibly fatally, when westbound car 2597 of the Fourth street line collided with northbound Jefferson avenue car 2305 at Jefferson and Lafayette avenues at 6:40 a. m. Monday.

Three men, passengers on the Jefferson avenue car, were thrown from the rear platform to the street and the fender of the Fourth street car passed over them.

Louis Joachim of 2107A Withnell avenue and John Kirchoff of 3258 Ohio avenue crawled from under the car while horrified spectators looked on.

Volunteer rescuers dragged Martin Ehret of 2710 Utah street from beneath the wheel guards. He was cut and bruised and internally injured, and it is thought he will die.

Patrolman Smith, who was at the corner when the accident occurred, sent in an ambulance call when the cars hit. His prompt action brought quick aid to the injured.

Many Persons Hurt.

Those hurt were:

Margaret Kiefer, 124 Lesperance street; bruises and nervous shock.

James White, 1242 South Broadway; both knee caps dislocated.

John Kirchoff, 3258 Ohio avenue; head cut.

Charles F. Koch, 3618 Texas avenue; face and head cut and bruised.

M. J. Conroy, 3339 Ohio avenue, right arm cut.

Millard Bestwright, 3316 Hickory street, right foot crushed.

Fred Rose, conductor of Fourth street car, head cut by flying glass.

Track Being Repaired.

Though the front of his car was demolished, Motorman A. W. Handshey of the Fourth street car was protected by the vestibule and was not hurt.

At the point where the accident occurred the Fourth street line eastbound track is being repaired and both the east and westbound cars use the westbound track. The Fourth street cars have the right of way.

Motorman W. L. Davidson of the Jefferson avenue car, according to the statements of witnesses, either did not see the Fourth street car or attempted to cross the street ahead of it, in violation of rules.

There is a sharp down grade toward the west on the Fourth street line. Passengers say that, knowing he had the right of way, Motorman Handshey of the Fourth street car did not check his speed as he approached the crossing. His car crashed into the crowded rear platform of the Jefferson car.

The impact threw the Jefferson car from the rails. Handshey stuck to his post and stopped his car within ten feet after the collision.

Many See the Accident.

Nearly fifty persons were waiting for both cars at the intersection, which is a popular transfer point. They were horrified to see men hurled headlong turough the air and under the Fourth street car.

Almost immediately Joachim and Kirchoff, bleeding and covered with mud, crawled from under the car, but the groans of Ehret caused many to believe that several others were imprisoned.

Injured Were on Platform.

After turning in the ambulance call Policeman Smith helped citizens to extricate Ehret, who was taken to the office of Dr. F. J. Pfeffer, 1653 South Jefferson avenue. The physician decided that he was too badly hurt to make the trip to the City Hospital and later he was taken to his home in a private ambulance.

Miss Kiefer, who was hysterical, also was sent home.

Nearly all of those injured were on the crowded rear platform of the Jefferson avenue car. Conductor Weindel said there were seats inside but the men preferred to stand on the back platform and smoke as the rule permitting smoking in the three rear seats was suspended because the windows were closed on account of the cold weather. None of those in the rear seats were injured.

RICH RESIDENT OF CHINA ARRIVES WITH TWO WIVES

Left Three in Hongkong and Is Not Allowed to Land in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28.—The immigration officials of this port encountered a new problem when the arrival of the Pacific mail liner Korea from the Orient with H. Bosman, a wealthy resident of Hongkong, who was one of the vessel's passengers, desired to land accompanied by two wives.

Mr. Bosman frankly confessed that he believes in plural marriages and not only has he the two wives who are accompanying him on this trip, but states that he left three more wives at his home in Hongkong.

The trio with their children, the issue of Bosman's marriage with one of the wives now with him, are detained aboard the Korea until the immigration officials decide what shall be done in the matter.

Bosman is reputed to be several times a millionaire and is one of the most prominent land owners of Hongkong. He is a Eurasian, his father having been of English birth, while his mother was a Chinese.

PETTIGREW SAYS REPUBLICANS TRIED TO BRIBE HIM IN 1904

Former Senator Declares He Was Offered $10,000 to Work for Watson.

SALEM, S. D., Sept. 28.—While traveling with William J. Bryan from Sioux Falls to Mitchell, former Senator R. F. Pettigrew today publicly announced that four years ago he had been approached by the Republican National Committee through a former United States Senator with an offer of $10,000 if he would deliver 10 speeches, at such places as the Committee would dictate, in support of the candidacy of Thomas Watson of Georgia, the People's party candidate for President.

Mr. Pettigrew said that, with the view to ascertaining what was behind the offer, he wrote his Senator friend and asked him if the amount could not be increased to $20,000, but the reply was that they were not inclined to give one man that much.

Senator Pettigrew declared that he declined the offer and conducted an investigation, with the result that he satisfied himself that the Republican party financed, in a large measure, Mr. Watson's campaign.

CHICAGO-CINCINNATI GAME IS POSTPONED TO FRIDAY

CINCINNATI, Sept. 28.—To avoid the possibility of the game being thrown out on a technicality the postponed game between Chicago and Cincinnati, which it had been planned to play today, has been deferred until Friday and there will be no National League ball game in this city today.

The league constitution provides for the playing off of postponed games "during a subsequent series" and as the Chicago-Cincinnati game series would not properly begin until tomorrow, the technical point was raised that a game today would not be played "during" this series.

The race being so close, President Herrmann of the Cincinnati club decided to be on the safe side and today announced the postponement of the game until next Friday.

HASKELL MADE MANY EXCUSES ASSERTS WEST

Attorney-General Says He Can't Select Real One for Oil Case Action.

VOTED FOR GOVERNOR

But Present Opponent Says He Did Not Then Know Candidate's Record.

Charles E. West, attorney-general of Oklahoma, whose official activity started the controversy that has resulted in the resignation of Gov. Haskell as treasurer of the national Democratic Committee and in the unprecedented epistolary duel between President Roosevelt and William J. Bryan, is at the Southern Hotel.

The attorney-general is a small man—about 5 feet 4 inches in height. He is smooth-faced, small-featured and boyish-looking. He was dressed Monday in a brownish cutaway suit and a tan-colored flat-topped derby.

"I have nothing to say, nothing to say about this controversy," he exclaimed. "I am not interested in the matter personally, only officially. The case against the Prairie Gas and Oil Co. is still pending in the Supreme Court of Oklahoma and I do not want to talk about it.

"I brought the proceedings against the Prairie Gas Company in the district court of Logan county and Gov. Haskell began the proceedings in the Supreme Court to prohibit me from prosecuting the case. The second case was decided against me and I now have a motion pending in the Supreme Court for a rehearing.

Disagrees With the Court.

"The Court agrees with the Governor," West added with some warmth, "and I don't agree with either of them.

"And I don't intend to," he went on. "But it is not my place to talk until after the Supreme Court of the United States shall have passed upon the matter."

"Why don't you ask Haskell about it?" West replied to a subsequent question for more facts about the Prairie Gas case. "He'll spout for you."

"How do you explain Gov. Haskell's conduct in prohibiting you from prosecuting the gas company?" West was asked.

"He has given several explanations himself," West replied. "I don't know which is true. I'm not a mind-reader.

Not Trying to Run State.

"Haskell says I'm trying to run the State of Oklahoma. I think I'm only trying to run the Attorney-General's office in Oklahoma."

In regard to the national aspect of the controversy, West said:

"The people of Oklahoma are heartily in favor of Bryan. He came to our State and helped us to get our constitution. Gov. Haskell is not connected with teh national campaign now, and I don't see that he is an issue. The people of Oklahoma understand all about the controversy in our State and they will settle it."

Asked if he would be a candidate for Governor next time, Mr. West replied evasively. He said Haskell's term has more than two years yet to run, and under the Oklahoma constitution a Governor is not eligible to re-election.

West Voted for Haskell.

In response to a question whether he thought Gov. Haskell's action in preventing the prosecution of the Prairie Co. was in the interest of the Standard

ALIBI OF NEGRO IN MYSTERY OF GIRL'S DEATH IS ASSAILED

Prosecutor Johnson Denounces Prisoner as "Confused" in His Statements as to Actions on Day Nellie Nienaber Disappeared and Was Slain.

After questioning Jackson Long, the negro accused of murdering 14-year-old Nellie Nienaber, Prosecuting Attorney Johnston of St. Louis County stated that Long's statements were "confused and conflicting," and that apparently the negro has little on which to base an alibi.

Before he was taken into Johnston's presence, Long was beaten by other prisoners in the Clayton Jail because he refused to clean out a basin in which he had washed his hands.

To a Post-Dispatch reporter Long denied that he knew anything of the manner of the girl's death or that he had ever threatened to "get even" with the Nienaber family, which caused him to be fined early in August.

Long admitted, at the Coroner's inquest held at Kirkwood Sunday, that he was near the scene of the murder on the day it was committed, but did not admit being there during the afternoon, when Nellie Nienaber went there. His evasion of questions caused Coroner Bracy to lose patience and say, "If I had a rope I would string you up."

Crowd Willing to Act.

"That's right," cried men in the crowd attending the inquest. "Let's get a rope and hang him right now."

Dr. Bracy then rapped for order, saying that he had spoken hastily, and that he did not desire any demonstration against the prisoner.

Henry Nienaber and his wife, foster-parents of the murdered girl, testified at the inquest that they had caused the arrest of Long, who was their near neighbor, a short time before the murder. They said that when Long was fined $10 on their complaint by a Valley Park Justice of the Peace, he said: "You got me this time, but I'll get even, and it'll be in a way you'll remember."

The cause of his arrest had been a quarrel with Nellie Nienaber over a horse.

Long, answering questions with much reluctance, said he went Monday morning, Aug. 17, to Cole's grove, a mile from his home, the place where the assault and murder occurred in the afternoon. He said he left the grove before noon, and that in the afternoon he hauled rock from a quarry, going home before dark. Long's wife testified that he got home about 5 p. m.

Girl Entered Grove Alone.

Testimony of the Neinabers showed that Nellie went about 3 p. m., Aug. 17, to Cole's grove, to pick apples and peaches. She first went to the home of Mrs. Neiaber's sister, Mrs. Henry Quernheim, and asked that Mrs. Quernheim's two children might accompany her. The mother did not think best to let them go, and the girl returned to her home and proceeded to the grove.

On her way she followed a path near the negro's house. She entered a lane, in sight from his house, and walked a mile to the grove. She was not again seen alive.

FIRST MAN IN ELECTION CASES PLEADS GUILTY

"I Will Take My Medicine," Said John Smith, Negro Roustabout.

When John Smith, a negro, was arraigned in Judge Allen's court Monday, charged with voting fraudulently in the Second Precinct of the Fourth Ward at the Democratic primary Aug. 4, he surprised everybody by pleading guilty. Judge Allen was not sure that he heard right. He asked Smith if he intended to plead guilty. Smith said: "Yes, I'll take my medicine."

There is a report at the Four Courts that Smith will be used as a witness against men higher up. It was shortly after he and four other roustabouts had been arrested and taken before the grand jury that indictments were returned against Billy Lee and Sam Favors, reputed leaders of the negroes in that ward.

Eighteen in all were arraigned. The other 17 waived a plea. By direction of Judges Allen, Shields and Fisher they were put on the records as pleading not guilty. The cases were set for Oct. 6, 12, 13 and 14. Their attorneys will make a motion to quash, on the ground that the primary election law is unconstitutional because it provides no penalties.

The grand jury found a precinct Monday in which no fraud had been committed. It is the Tenth of the Seventh Ward. The registration was 283. The pollbooks showed 136 votes cast. The police canvass showed 133 as having voted. The discrepancy was accounted for by showing that two ballots were thrown out because they were not correctly marked.

The grand jury will conclude the examination of witnesses Wednesday and will make its final report Saturday.

PRINCETON, Ind., Sept. 28.—Mrs. Frank Cooper of Francisco fed her month-old twins condensed milk last night. One died in two hours. The other is in a critical condition. Doctors say the condensed food caused the poisoning.

OFFICE BOY LATE BECAUSE HIS TRAIN WAS ON TIME

Billy Butts, an office boy, who is habitually late for work, was warned several days ago that his next offense meant his dismissal. Saturday he was 30 minutes behind time.

"What now?" he was asked.

"I live in Kirkwood," was the quick response.

"Is that any reason why you should be late?"

"Not necessarily," stammered the lad, "but my train was on time."

"On time?" ejaculated the boss, "and still you're late."

"You see," he explained, "Kirkwood is on the Missouri Pacific road. As my train is never on time I always walk to the station, taking it easy, and make the train, even if I am half an hour late. It came in on time this morning and a lot of us missed it."

DAVIS TRYING TO PROVE MRS. RICE SHOT DR. RUSTIN

"Evidence Overwhelming Against This Woman," Lawyer Exclaims After She Is Cross-Examined.

PRISONER FLIRTS WHILE OTHERS TRY TO SAVE HIM

Mrs. Rice, Near Collapse, Testifies That She Agreed, for the Sake of the Physician's Wife, to End Her Own Life After He Was Dead.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 28.—After Mrs. Abbie Rice had testified at today's session of Charles E. Davis' preliminary trial on the charge of the murder of Dr. Frederick T. Rustin, the accused man exposed his defense for the first time. It will be an effort to prove that Mrs. Rice herself was the slayer.

This development took the courtroom crowd by surprise. The cross-examination of Mrs. Rice had been ended somewhat abruptly afetr she swore that she had agreed to kill herself after Rustin was slain, for the sake of the widow and children.

When Mrs. Rice was excused, Clara Gleason, at whose house Mrs. Rice had stayed for several days before Dr. Rustin's death, was called, and the State asked her several questions to bring out that it was impossible for the Rice woman to have left that house between midnight and 3 a. m., when Rustin was found wounded on his porch.

Attorney Gurley, for the defense, sprang to his feet and said:

"I object to an alibi being arranged here for this Rice woman. The evidence is overwhelmingly against her, instead of against Davis, and we will show it when we get our innings."

Woman Near Collapse.

Preceding the cross-examination of Mrs. Rice the witness was brought near to collapse. Her agitation was extreme when she told how Dr. Rustin, with whose murder Davis is charged, had asked her to kill herself when he died, and how she had consented to do so.

While Mrs. Rice was telling incidents of her past under direct examination, several women, warned by the Court, left the room. Others remained to hear her story.

Before she was turned over to the cross-examiner Mrs. Rice was asked by the prosecutor concerning arrangements for her own suicide after the death of Rustin.

Planned to Kill Self.

"When was the revolver loaded?" was asked.

"Friday night before the killing in Dr. Rustin's office."

"Did you take one of the cartridges?"

"Yes, so that I could reload the revolver and, go to some other part of town and kill myself."

"Why some other part of town?"

"So his death and mine would not be connected."

"Where were you going to kill yourself?"

"We had not decided upon that. It depended on how far I got away after killing him."

When the defense took Mrs. Rice she showed more agitation than at any time since the trial. She breathed hard and was very much excited. After leading Mrs. Rice through the testimony showing that she had four times tried to kill Rustin, but that her nerve failed her each time, the attorney asked:

"What inducement did Rustin hold out to you to kill him?"

"For His Wife's Sake."

"Nothing. I was for his wife."

"Do you mean to say you agreed to kill Rustin for his wife's sake?"

"Yes."

"Why did you consent?"

"I was in the habit of doing everything he told me to."

"Did he suggest that you kill yourself?"

"Yes, he suggested it and I wanted to kill myself because he wanted me to die at the same time he did."

Women Leave Courtroom.

Under cross-examination, Mrs. Rice said she came to Omaha with her sister who was en route West. Her sister previously had lived in Omaha and it was through her that Mrs. Rice went to Grace Walton's place, her sister stopping there a short time also. She declared that was the first time she had lived in a house of that kind. At this point several women were sent to an adjoining room.

Mrs. Rice said she had been unable to get employment in Des Moines and, with her sister decided to come to Omaha.

She then told of her illness and Dr. Rustin being called in a professional capacity.

Was Tired of Life.

Her first relations with him followed an operation he performed on her. During the months following the physician was with her most of his time, she declared, and he began drinking, but did not use morphine.

Mrs. Rice declared that the only inducement Dr. Rustin held out to her to take his life, which she came near doing four times, was consideration for his wife and children, and that her own sympathy for him in his distress was compelling cause of her consenting to shoot him.

"Were you tired of life?"

"Yes."

Planned Death for a Month.

"When did Rustin begin talking of death?"

"Just one month before he was killed."

"How much time had Rustin spent with you in the past four months?"

"A great deal more than he had with his wife and children," proudly answered Mrs. Rice.

"Had he been drinking?"

"Yes, he drank heavily for three months. For a week before his death he had been drinking more than usual."

"Did he use morphine?"

"I never saw Dr. Rustin use any morphine the entire time I was with him except on the last day when he took some morphine in order to keep himself from thinking about his approaching death."

"And you say the reason you did not kill yourself after Rustin's death was because you did not have a chance?"

"Yes."

"When were you arrested?"

"Ten o'clock on the morning of the murder."

Had Poison in Her Room.

"You had the aconite in your room then?"

"Yes."

"You could have taken it, couldn't you?"

"I did not have the opportunity."

"What was that $500 check given you by Dr. Rustin for?"

"So I could have my burial expenses paid. He said it would be good at the bank as soon as he was dead."

"Now, didn't you want the money to start a new life with?"

"Well, Dr. Rustin told me I could use it to start again with or to pay my burial expenses with, either one. He said I could kill myself or not, just as I pleased."

"Is not $500 a pretty good price for a woman in your position to pay for burial?"

"Well, Dr. Rustin wanted me to have the best of everything in that line."

No "Special Attachment."

"You did not have any special attachment for Mrs. Rustin and the children, did you?"

"Certainly I did not."

"Yet you would kill him and kill yourself for them?"

"Yes, and to please the doctor, too. I was willing to sacrifice myself for him and his."

To the surprise of the prosecutor and spectators, the defense suddenly announced that the cross-examination of Mrs. Rice was finished, and she was excused from the witness stand.

Half a dozen witnesses were placed on the stand, all corroborating, in some way, the story told by Mrs. Rice as to her movements in connection with Davis and Rustin on the night of the murder.

Chief of these was P. H. Meyers, the druggist whom whom Rustin purchased morphine just before placing Davis on the car going out to the Rustin house. Meyers saw Rustin purchase the morphine, go to a saloon, come back with Davis, place Davis on the car and then join Mrs. Rice on the corner and start walking out toward the Rustin home.

During much of the testimony Davis sat in his chair near his banker brother and carried on a flirtation with two flashily dressed women.

Mrs. Rice recovered her composure after her cross-examination, and even smiled as she watched Davis' flirtation with the two feminine spectators.

FREIGHT RATE INVESTIGATION IS UNDER WAY

Shippers' Representative Tells Commission Railroads' Profits Have Increased.

WESTERN CITIES HURT

Complain That They Are Discriminated Against in Violation of Law.

That railroads carrying freight into cities from points east of the Mississippi River and north and east of the Missouri River are discriminating against the shippers of St. Louis and other large Western trade centers was the contention made before the Interstate Commerce Commission in session at the Jefferson Hotel Monday.

Chairman Knapp is presiding and sitting with him are Commissioners C. A. Prouty, Frank Lane and E. E. Clark. The Commission is meeting for the special purpose of hearing this complaint.

More than one hundred representatives of commercial organizations and railroad officials were present when the session opened at 10 a. m.

Judge F. H. Cowan, attorney for the combined shipping interests, made the initial argument.

Rates Have Been Increased.

He pointed out that there is no obligation on the part of the public to guarantee uniform earnings of railroads or to pay high rates to make the business of the roads profitable.

The rates now in effect he said are an advance over rates which were made in 1903 and at that time held by the commission to be unjustifiable.

His arguments against the present rates schedule were: There is no change in conditions to justify an advance over the 1903 rates. The normal volume of traffic has increased and earnings have increased.

Temporary falling off in traffic does not justify an advance and there has not been sufficient increase in operating expenses to justify it. Prices of railroad material have decreased with the falling off of traffic.

The equal amount spent for labor performs as great service as in 1903, though wages have advanced since then.

The earnings per mile have increased since 1903 and this has been nearly sufficient to offset the advance in the price of labor.

Profits Not Correctly Shown.

Traffic has increased in volume. Net earnings have increased 22 per cent and economies in handling the traffic and the increase in volume of business have offset the increase in operating expenses.

Operating expenses, according to reports, are enormous, but in them is included large amounts for betterments, which are property dividends, and hence the profits are not correctly shown.

Operating expenses also embrace the cost of culpable negligence and errors of construction and operation.

The real net income in the average year is sufficient to give a fair return on a fair valuation of the property.

The value of the property should not be augmented by a potential value based on a capacity to earn more than a fair return on the investment, which, in turn is based on rates charged, higher than is usual for such service.

Rates voluntarily made in past years were presumptively high enough to afford fair returns when they existed and the carrier should have the burden of justifying any advance.

Elimination of Competition Caused Advance.

The fact of advances being agreed upon takes away any presumption of reasonableness and the elimination of competition in order to affect the advance presumptively renders them unjust.

The country and traffic are growing on these lines and the depression can but be temporary, hence affords no grounds for advances in rates.

Rates must be judged by normal conditions and not abnormal, temporary conditions.

Commerce and manufacture will likely be affected and traffic reduced if these rates are continued.

Even if the earnings have permanently declined, unjust rates are not justifiable for the property and business of the public is just as much entitled to protection as the railroads.

Depression of business affects manufacturers, dealers and consumers equally with the railroads, or even to a greater degree. The railroad must share adversity if they would take the benefits of prosperity.

The railroads claim expenses in handling State business are so great that profit has to be made out of interstate business. But that is no justification for unreasonable rates.

Complaints of additional expense caused by recent legislation regarding operating methods are groundless because generally it benefits the roads in the end.

Operating expenses cannot always be cut at once to fit a falling off of business. And the volume of traffic in 1907 was so great that operating expenses were very high.

Texas points seem to be singled out for rate advances.

After Judge Cowan's argument Martin Clardy, representing the Missouri Pacific and other lines, announced that the railroads would not make an argument until after the shippers had rested their case.

DREADED INSANITY DUE TO KIDNEY DISORDERS

Symptoms and Home Treatment

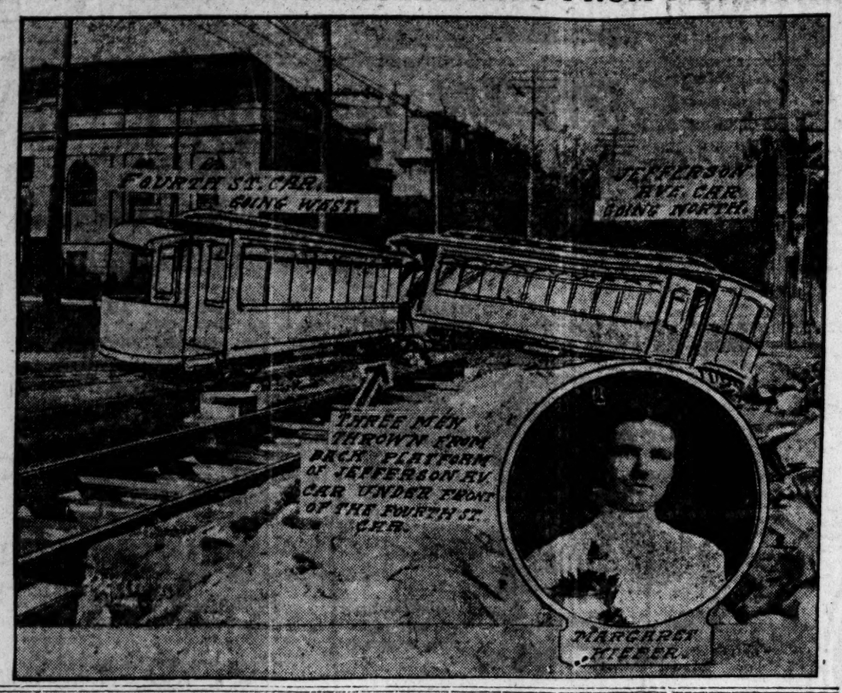

Gaut, the celebrated German specialist, asserts that seven-tenths of the feeble-minded and insane are the victims of kidney diseases.

Nervousness, excitability, restlessness, melancholia, pains in the back and head, neuralgia and rheumatic pains, fevers, chills, scanty urine, bladder ailments, all indicate that the kidneys are affected and weakened, needing tonic treatment.

The very best physician should be consulted at once, unless the patient fully recognizes the symptoms, in which case let the following simple, inexpensive, but reliable prescription be used for several weeks.

Ask any honest druggist to mix one-half ounce fluid extract Buchu, with one ounce compound fluid Balmwort and two ounces compound syrup Sarsaparilla. Then take a teaspoonful after each meal and one at retiring, drinking plenty of good, pure water between meals. This mixture makes a splendid tonic and blood purifier.

WOUNDED MAN SAVED BY BLOOD FROM VEINS OF ASSAILANT

Prisoner Taken From Jail to Hospital Where Transfusion Is Performed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Jacob Van Evera, a farmer, residing near Randall, Montgomery County, saw an Italian roaming about his farm with a gun yesterday. Van Evera ordered the man to leave, and on his refusal, the men clinched, and the gun was discharged, the bullet entering Van Evera's thigh. He was hurried to a hospital at Amsterdam.

Van Evera had lost so much blood that the surgeons feared to amputate his leg and concluded that the last resort to save his life was to transfuse blood, and the Italian, who was a trespasser on the Van Evera farm, consented to give up the blood.

The Italian was hurried from the County Jail to the hospital, and about a quart of his blood was transfused into Van Evera's body. Van Evera's condition is very critical.

Whether the shooting was intentional or was an accident is a question.

CHILDREN OVERCOME BY GAS, ON ROAD TO RECOVERY

Nurse in Hugh J. Flynn's Family Inadvertently Turned on Fluid.

The three children of Hugh J. Flynn, Deputy Tax Collector, of 8300 Minnesota avenue, who were overcome by gas Sunday night, are out of danger.

Mr. and Mrs. Flynn went out Sunday evening, leaving the children, Mary, 9 years old; Katherine, 6, and Margaret, 4, in the care of Mary Jordan, the nurse. She put them to bed at about 8:30 and turn out the gas, but inadvertently partially turned it on again.

When Mr. and Mrs. Flynn returned at midnight the nursery was filled with gas and the children were unconscious. If the door had not been left partially ajar they would probably have been past aid.

Mr. Flynn carried them to the porch. Mary quickly revived. The others were given emergency treatment and Dr. Joseph Hardy was summoned. He worked over them for some time before they were out of danger.

MAN JUST OUT OF PRISON SHOOTS HIS WIFE TWICE

Kansas Cityan Was Purchasing Ticket to St. Louis When Arrested.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 28.—After shooting his wife twice and inflicting wounds which probably will cause her death, Julius Lipsche was arrested this morning as he bought a railway ticket for St. Louis.

The Lipsches had been estranged for two years. A year ago Lipsche was sent to prison for throwing carbolic acid on Mrs. Lipsche's brothers. He had just been released.

Last night he accosted his wife as she left the Jewish Educational Institute, where she was employed, and after a few words of reproach, shot her.

REKINDLED FIRE DESTROYS HOUSE AFTER FIREMEN LEAVE

Dog's Barking Arouses Family Asleep in a Burning House.

After firemen had left the home of J. W. Hahne, 6112A Ridge avenue, early Monday, believing they had put out a blaze which drove the family of three from their beds into the cold, and damaged two of the three rooms, a second fire broke out and completed the work of destruction.

The firemen were recalled, but were unable to save the contents of the home. Mr. Hahn's loss is $1000.

Rex, the family's small black dog, awoke Mr. and Mrs. Hahne and their son, Russell Hahne, by barking at 4 a. m. They found their rooms filled with smoke, and without stopping to dress, hurried down the front stairs and called the firemen.

An engine company came and put out the fire, after it had destroyed the kitchen furniture and damaged that in the middle room. Then the firemen went away.

Soon after the firemen's departure, about 5:30, while the three, who had returned and dressed, were trying to get some articles out of the charred kitchen, the son noticed flames in the middle room. The fire seemed smouldered in the floor.

The second fire was the more severe of the two and left the family almost nothing. Their insurance is $600.

Oil Co., West pointed to the following paragraph in a letter written by him (West) and quoted by President Roosevelt in his latest reply to Bryan:

"The only person that the prohibitions could help was the Standard Oil Co. and that he hazarded as much as he did for them as he did after his sudden change of heart supplies the necessary factor for any intelligent man to reckon whether the Governor of Oklahoma has a leaning toward the Standard Oil Co.; and therefore the President's statement seems to me a mild rebuke."

Before concluding the discussion Mr. West stated that he voted for Haskell for Governor and was under the impression that Haskell, like himself (West), was against the Standard Oil Co. Mr. West said he (West) lived in Oklahoma and Haskell in Indian Territory before statehood and that he for that reason did not know much about Haskell but thought he was an anti-Standard Oil man because Monnett made speeches for him during the campaign.

PHYSICIAN CHARGES WIFE READ BIBLE TO PATIENTS

Dr. L. William Ray Seeks Divorce Alleging Wife Embarrassed Him.

Dr. L. William Ray of 4483A Finney avenue obtained a divorce from Mrs. Rhoda E. Ray of 1907 North Grand avenue Monday in Judge Taylor's court after telling the story of his 13 years of married life. Mrs. Ray did not offer a defense.

The physician is a deacon in the Grand Avenue Baptist Church, of which his wife is also a member, according to his testimony.

His wife, he said, caused scenes at his office because he treated women patients without leaving the door open so she could observe him. Frequently, he said, she ran patients away by insisting on reading the Bible to them when they came there for medical treatment.

"She would find fault with my hat," he testified, "and with books I brought to the house. In the last six or seven years I have had to smuggle in every book I wanted to read.

"She would not permit me to smoke in the house or eat between meals. At church meetings she embarrassed me by arising and stating her views. She was always dictating to me."

BANKER'S CHAUFFEUR FINED $300 FOR SPEEDING AUTO

Justice Pollard Imposes Record Punishment on Employe of Merchants-Laclede Official.

This is the largest fine for the offense ever assessed in St. Louis. The maximum is $500.

Holcomb formerly was chauffeur for A. C. Stewart, former President of the Police Board.

He was arrested by Patrolman Ferguson on Walton avenue Saturday night.

While employed by Mr. Stewart he was fined four times for speeding. May 8 last he was fined $25 by Judge Pollard. He admitted Monday that he was going 28 miles an hour.

"You are too persistent an offender," said Judge Pollard in assessing the fine.

BEAUTY CONTEST WINNER SHOWERED WITH PRESENTS

Flowers, Candy and Messages of Congratulation for Miss DuBenrick.

Candy, flowers, notes of congratulation and telephone messages in which "so glad" and "I expected it" were often repeated, made Monday a busy and a joyous day for Miss Pearl Du Benrick of 2901 Barrett street, winner of first prize in the Sunday Post-Dispatch Business Women's Beauty Contest.

"Everybody has been so kind," said Miss Du Benrick, as she paused after signing a messenger's receipt for a box of flowers, one of many which had come since her success was announced in Sunday's Post-Dispatch.

"No," she said in response to a question, "I haven't got any proposals by mail yet. I've heard these sometimes come under such circumstances, so I'll try not to faint if I get a few, and if I don't happen to get them, I won't feel that I've missed anything.

"But I never knew I had so many friends. In fact, some of the people who have written me and sent candy and flowers are people I don't believe I know. But I thank them just as much as the others.

"I don't know when I shall get around to answer all the letters and acknowledge the gifts. Not today, I'm afraid, for I'm kept too busy answering the 'phone by people who are congratulating me. Some say they want to see me in that beautiful new gown, but that the judges were so kind as to award me."

Miss DuBenrick is the daughter of C. W. DuBenrick, and is a teacher in the Strassberger Conservatory of Music. The verdict awarding her first honors in the competition, in which photographs of many beautiful women were entered, was reached by a process of elimination.

The prize awarded to her is a Paris gown valued at $200, which has been on exhibition at Barr's for some weeks.

YOAKUM PLEADS FOR SQUARE DEAL FOR GOOD TRUSTS

Railway Official Says Indiscriminate Attacks Hurt Both Capital and Labor.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28.—B. F. Yoakum, chairman of the executive committees of the Rock Island-Frisco railway system, addressed the convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, making a strong plea for the cessation of legislation hostile to the railroads o fthe country.

The railroad mileage of the United States was 227,000 miles last year, he said, having increased 24 per cent in 10 years. The number of firemen, now 70,000, had increased 92 per cent and their annual payroll had grown from $23,000,000 to $53,000,000, the amount paid them last year, but since the beginning of the recent hard times last October the payroll had been cut $3,000,000.

What was needed for a restoration of the full payroll and a continuance of the growth of railway business and railway construction was a restoration of confidence in financial investments.

Something like $6,000,000,000 would be needed in the next 10 years for building new roads and equipping them if the progress of the last decade was to be kept up, and New York bankers, who had furnished 90 per cent of the money needed for building the 105,000 miles of railroad west of the Mississippi River, must be depended on to supply the money.

Co-Operative Policy Necessary.

Continuing, Mr. Yoakum said:

Any policy that stirs up internal strife, that prejudices one interest against another, that injures or endangers our groundwork of co-operation, is hurtful alike to all. As a nation we should stand shoulder to shoulder for the rights of both the public and the law-abiding corporations and the indiscriminate denunciations of all capital of the country should cease.

"Those who have the true interest of the country at heart should work for the enforcement of the laws which have been made effective in the last few years, vigorously prosecuting every violator.

In conclusion, I wish to say that I am heartily in sympathy with you in your work. I believe organized labor and organized capital can better work together and the future will so demonstrate."

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

Italian King Consents to Cousin's Marriage to Rich American Girl

Italian Member of Royal Family to Start Immediately for United States.

QUEEN OPPOSED MATCH

Romantic Courtship Followed Introduction at Jamestown Ball.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1908, by the Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

ROME, Sept. 28.—King Victor Emmanuel, as the head of the house of Savoy, has finally given his royal consent to the marriage of his cousin, Louis, the Duke of the Abruzzi, and Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of United States Senator Elkins of West Virginia.

Having won the King's approval, Abruzzi will leave Italy immediately for America. According to his present plans, the wedding will be celebrated some time during the month of November.

Abruzzi is a Captain in the Italian Navy, at present in command of Italy's finest battleship, the Regina Elena. Because of that and also because he is a Prince of the reigning house of Savoy, he and his bride will be escorted home to Italy by a squadron of Italian warships.

The honeymoon will be spent at the magnificent royal palace at Caserta, "The Versailles of Naples."

The palace is an imposing edifice, built in the richest Italian style in 1752, by Vanutelli. The south front is 830 feet long by 134 feet high. The park, with lofty pruned hedges, contains beautiful fountains and cascades, adorned with statues and a remarkable botanical garden.

The press here has been consistently opposed to the Abruzzi-Elkins match. Even those newspapers which commonly are not too fervid in their loyalty to the King treat it as a mesalliance calculated to undermine Italy's prestige and injure her standing among the nations. Dowager Queen Margherita, the King's mother, has stoutly opposed the union and probably never will be reconciled to it.

Courtship Unique.

THE Elkins-Abruzzi courtship stands out unique among the international romances in which American girls have figured. The Duke is no degenerate bearer of a dusty old name and title seeking dollars to wipe out a mass of folly's debts. He is young, brilliant, rich and royal, and he is one of the most famous explorers in the world, a distinguished naval officer and a man who would have "made good," it is said of him, though of humble instead of royal birth.

And Miss Elkins is a typical American girl, high spirited, adventurous and athletic, a society favorite and graced with rare beauty. She and the Duke are admittedly deep in love with each other, but they have had to contend with the prejudice, pride and laws which hedge about the ancient Italian royal house of Savoy. Their courtship has aroused interest throughout the world. Here is the story, chapter by chapter:

CHAPTER I.
Met at a Ball.

In the spring of 1907 the Italian fleet paid a visit to the United States as an incident of the Jamestown exposition. The Duke of the Abruzzi was conspicuous among the officers of the fleet and the recipient of many social attentions, befitting his royal rank.

One of these entertainments in honor of the Duke was a ball given by Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson. On the ballroom floor Col. Bromwell, chief aid to the President, introduced the Duke and a stately beauty. She was Katherine Elkins of West Virginia. The eyes of the young people met and there sprang up in both their breasts an emotion which was to prove once more the venerable adage that "All the world loves a lover."

After that, significantly enough, Miss Elkins was favored with the Duke's particular attentions at every social gathering. But no one thought then of an international alliance—that is, no one, perhaps, but the Duke and Miss Elkins.

CHAPTER II.
Courted Under Alias.

In the following spring, at the time when the winter sojourners at the fashionable resorts of Florida were wending their way northward, it became known that the Duke of the Abruzzi, under an assumed name, had visited Miami and St. Augustine. Miss Elkins and her mother had been among the winter guests at those two places and the Duke had been much in the young woman's company, indeed, had paid her constant court.

Then, for the first time, they publicly began to realize that there was in prospect the most brilliant marriage ever contracted by an American girl, a union with a Prince of the blood royal, who stood a chance of one day sitting on the throne of Italy.

CHAPTER III.
No Dot Wanted.

After that there were many rumors and reports. It was said that, should the Duke and the American girl wed he would have to surrender all claims to the throne or else the marriage would have to be morganatic. The statutes of the House of Savoy are strict.

It was conceded that neither Senator Elkins nor his daughter would consider a morganatic marriage. Either Miss Elkins would become the Duchess of the Abruzzi, with every right and position belonging to that title, or she would not wed the man she loved, it was said.

There was talk of a demand for a dot that would pay an annual income of $100,000. But that gossip was set at rest by a statement from Rome that neither the Duke, nor his cousin the King, wanted any dot. It was usual, said the Rome report, for princesses of the House of Savoy, to come dowerless to their marriages.

And while all these reports were being published the Duke of the Abruzzi, who had followed Miss Elkins to Washington, sailed home, smiling.

CHAPTER IV.
Another Suitor.

A few days later there was published the country over a story that Lieut. Adolphus Andrews of the United States Navy, a stalwart young Texan who had been in command of a cutter doing coast patrol duty in the Philippines, was hurrying home on furlough to press his suit for Miss Elkins' hand.

It was said that Senator Elkins would welcome him, for the Senator did not take very kindly to foreigners of title. He had been made very mad a day or two before by the published statement that the King of Italy contemplated giving him some lofty patent of nobility to put him "on a plane with the Duke of Abruzzi."

But it was soon found out that, if Lieut. Andrews had any hope when he made his race round the world, it was useless. Miss Elkins' heart was pledged to the royal young explorer and mountain climber far away in Italy.

CHAPTER V.
Queen Opposed Match.

After these matters had been published repeated conferences of the House of Savoy were held. The members of the royal family displayed violent opposition to the proposed international marriage. The Queen was especially bitter. And the press, even anti-royalist organs, denounced the proposed marriage. They said it would cheapen the dignity of the Italian royal house for one of its princes to marry a foreign commoner.

And so matters rested until the present announcement that the King, in spite of all opposition in his own family and among the people, had consented

AFRAID TO EAT
Girl Starving on Ill-Selected Food.

"Several years ago I was actually starving," writes a Me. girl, "yet dared not eat for fear of the consequences.

"I had suffered from indigestion from overwork, irregular meals and improper food, until at last my stomach became so weak I could eat scarcely any food without great distress.

"Many kinds of food were tried, all with the same discouraging effects. I steadily lost health and strength until I was but a wreck of my former self.

"Having heard of Grape-Nuts and its great merits, I purchased a package, but with little hope that it would help me—I was so discouraged.

"I found it not only appetizing, but that I could eat it as I liked and that it satisfied the craving for food without causing distress, and if I may use the expression, 'it filled the bill.'

"For months Grape-Nuts was my principal article of diet. I felt from the very first that I had found the right way to health and happiness, and my anticipations were fully realized.

"With its continued use I regained my usual health and strength. Today I am well and can eat anything I like, yet Grape-Nuts food forms a part of my bill of fare." "There's a Reason."

LOVE LAUGHS AT LOCKSMITHS, BUT LOVER'S IN JAIL

Illinoisan Arrested for Eloping With His Fiancee's Younger Sister.

If it is true, as the poets say, that "Love laughs at locksmiths," he has the chance of his life to prove it by getting Charles Mason out of jail and restoring him to his sweetheart, Miss Nellie Copner, 19 years old, of Macon, Ill., a little town near Decatur, where Mason is a prisoner.

Just how long he will remain in the heavy hardware house depends on the strength of Miss Copner's love.

Mason was captured in St. Louis in company with Miss Copner's 16-year-old sister, Trela, with whom he eloped from Macon, despite the fact that he was engaged to marry Nellie.

Awaiting Fiancee's Decision.

A long-distance telephone message to the Post-Dispatch from Macon Monday said that Nellie, though apparently jilted, has not yet consented to the prosecution of Mason on a charge of abduction. The authorities have decided to hold him while his fiancee makes up her mind.

If she says she is still willing to marry him despite his sudden and unconventional departure with her sister, he will be set free.

Trela has returned home and has been forgiven.

Mason is 21 years old. He went to Macon three years ago and became acquainted with the Copner family. He went to dances and entertainments with Nellie and occasionally Trela, Nellie's "kid sister," then anly 13 and wearing short dresses, accompanied them.

After it became generally known that Mason and Nellie were engaged his visits to the Copner home became more frequent. In the two years that followed Trela grew taller and her skirts grew longer. She was no longer the "kid sister," but a "young lady."

Mason's attentions to her were not regarded with suspicion by the family. Why shouldn't he be nice to his future sister-in-law?

Younger Sister Disappeared.

Saturday night Trela did not appear at the supper table. When Nellie went to her sister's room she found that all of Trela's "things" were gone.

Inquiry showed that Mason and Trela had driven from Macon in a buggy half an hour earlier.

Constable Adams, who is a brother-in-law of the Copner girls, followed the trail to Decatur, but the elopers had already taken a westbound train.

Telegrams were sent to the St. Louis police. Mason and Trela were taken in custody when they stepped from the train at Union Station Sunday.

Trela has refused to state why she left home with her sister's affianced husband.

Mason says that he merely meant to take her to visit his relatives in Missouri.

DIVER WINS IN CONTEST WITH A DEVIL FISH

Thirty Feet Under Water Man and Octopus Fight a Duel.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28.—Wrapped in the tentacles of a giant devil fish, Martin Lund, a diver employed by the Coast Wrecking Co., fought for his life in the hold of the wrecked steamer Pomona, which lies in 30 feet of water in Fort Ross cove off the Marin County coast.

Lund arrived here yesterday after an experience that comes to few men and he will enjoy a vacation before again donning his diver's dress.

More terrible even than the fight between Gilliatt, Hugo's hero of "The Toilers of the Sea," was the battle in the hold of the sunken ship.

The devil fish had evidently entered the vessel's hold during the night and Lund was at work some time before he became aware of its presence.

Helmet's Loss Threatened.

A giant tentacle four inches in diameter first gripped one leg. Before Lund could realize what had happened another encircled his thigh. The diver began to chop frantically at the rubber-like bonds, and he signaled to the barge above that he wanted to ascend. Two more tentacles squirmed out of the darkness and one entangled his neck. The men on the surface tried to comply with his signal. His helmet threatened to be pulled off and he notified them to desist.

With one arm free he hacked away at the tenacles until they were partially crippled, but he was being drawn toward the beak when he saw the outlines of the body of the devil fish.

Nearly Crushed as Monster Dies.

He plunged his knife with all his power into the head, repeating the blow until he had slashed it into sections. In its death throes the octopus tightened its tentacles until the diver was almost crushed. Lund finally cut himself free and was brought to the surface fainting. Another diver brought some of the severed tenacles to the surface and it is hoped to raise the body and send it to this city for exhibition.

PASTOR AND 4 OTHERS SHOT AT CHURCH; 3 DEAD

Crowd From "Blind Tiger" Use Revolvers on Tennessee Worshipers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JELLICO, Tenn., Sept. 28.—As 500 worshipers emerged from a church at Anthras, Tenn., yesterday, a crowd of men filed from a "blind tiger" 50 yards from the church and began firing into the congregation with revolvers.

Three men were shot down in the church door, dying instantly. The pastor, the Rev. A. Kind, fell in the church yard, mortally wounded. Another worshiper was shot as he descended the church steps.

John Bennett, J. W. McKinney and Edward Thomas never spoke after they were shot. They died in the church door. The Rev. Mr. Kind is not expected to live through the day. The other wounded man, named Gibson, probably will recover.

Minister Fought Saloon.

The illicit barroom had been operated for months and the Rev. Mr. Kind had tried hard to have it closed.

It is believed that the minister's warfare on the "blind tiger" precipitated the shooting.

Anthras is five miles from a railroad and has no telephone connection. The Jellico authorities have not learned the names of the men implicated in the tragedy.

Caleb Powers, the Kentuckian who was in prison eight years and faced four trials on a charge of complicity in Gov. Goebel's assassination, was baptized in the Baptist Church here yesterday in the presence of 500. In reply to a question as to why he was baptised in Jellico he said that his grandfather, grandmother, father and mother were born, lived and died here.

"NOT BUSINESS OF ROOSEVELT'S" ASSERTS PRIEST

St. Louis Attorney Says He Will Vote For, but Is Not Supporting Bryan.

Judge Priest refused Monday to discuss the reference to him in President Roosevelt's latest answer to Mr. Bryan. He said he had not read it.

"I have been misrepresented and misquoted so many times that I must decline to be interviewed on this question," he said to a Post-Dispatch reporter.

With reference to the interview in the Globe-Democrat attributed to Judge Priest, in which he is quoted as saying he was supporting Bryan, Judge Priest declared he had been misquoted but did not say in what particular except that he denied he said he is supporting Bryan.

"Are you supporting Bryan?" was asked by the Post-Dispatch reporter.

"I will vote for him," answered Judge Priest.

Judge Priest's attention was called to the allusion made by the President to his being attorney for the Waters-Pierce Oil Co.

"It's none of Mr. Roosevelt's business whom or what I represent," said the attorney, hotly. "I can represent whom I please without consulting him."

YUENGLING DIES IN HOSPITAL

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Fred D. Yuengling, son of the late wealthy brewer, a man-about-town, whose exploits a decade or more ago astonished New Yorkers with numerous sensations, died in the prison ward at Bellevue Hospital last night.

Yuengling was arrested some time ago on a charge of failing to pay a bill for automobile hire. He had been released on bail, but was surrendered last night by his bondsmen. The prison authorities gave the cause of death as chronic alcoholism. He was 42 years old and married.

WIFE SCOLDED, LEAVES HOME

Resented Husband's Protest Against Her Dancing.

Seventeen-year-old Mrs. Albert Whitney left her home, 4020 Easton avenue, bareheaded, after her husband chided her in the presence of guests for dancing with one of a number of young men they had invited to their home.

Whitney Monday asked the police to help him find his wife, who, he said, left the house at 3 a. m. Sunday.

Young Mrs. Whitney, when she left home, wore a white silk waist, a tan skirt and black patent leather shoes. She is 5 feet 4 inches in height, weighs 120 pounds and has dark complexion and gray eyes.

BALD HEADS NOT WANTED

Baldness Is Too Generally Considered a Sign of Advanced Age

A bald-headed person does not have an equal chance with one blessed with a healthy head of hair, because baldness is too generally accepted as an indication of age. Many large corporations have established an age limit, and refuse to take men over 35 years of age as new employes.

Almost 65% of bald-headed people may regain a good head of healthy hair if they will follow our advice and accept our offer. We have a remedy that we positively guarantee to grow hair on any head, unless the roots of the hair are entirely dead, their follicles closed, and the scalp has become glazed and shiny. We want people to try this remedy at our risk, with the distinct understanding that unless it does exactly what we claim it will, and gives satisfaction in every respect, we shall make no charge for the remedy used during the trial.

We know exactly what we are talking about, and with this offer back of our statement no one should scoff, doubt our word or hesitate to put our remedy to an actual test.

We want everyone in St. Louis who is suffering from any scalp or hair trouble, dandruff, falling hair or baldness to try our Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We want them to use it regularly—say until three bottles have been used—and if it does not eradicate dandruff, cleanse and refresh the scalp, tighten the hair in its roots, and grow new hair, we will return every cent paid us for the remedy for the mere asking. There is no formality expected, and we exact no obligation from the user whatever.

We are established right here in St. Louis, and make this offer with a full understanding that our business success entirely depends upon the sort of treatment we accord our customers, and we would not dare make this above offer unless we were positively certain that we could substantiate it in every particular. Samuel J. Williams Loses Life on an Outing With Friends on Mississippi.

A trip in a launch which he and a friend had worked seven months to build and in the enjoyment of which he was almost enthusiastic, cost the life of Samuel Joseph Williams, aged 23, of 3166 Fairmount avenue. He fell into the Mississippi and was drowned near Alton Sunday morning.

Williams and Clifford A. Vogel of 2840 St. Vincent avenue built the boat. Both were formerly enthusiastic oarsmen, but a year ago they began work on a launch which took them seven months to build. It was christened the "Rownomore."

YIDDISH PLAY AT OLYMPIC LIMIT OF REALISM

"God of Vengeance" Shows Life Hinted at in "Mrs. Warren's Profession."

THE limit of offensive plays was reached and passed last night when Sholom Asch's dreadful three-act drama, "The God of Vengance," was presented by a Yiddish company under the management of Edwin A. Relkin at the Olympic theater.

The performance of this play would not be permitted on the English-speaking stage, its closest parallel, "Mrs. Warren's Profession," having been forbidden for merely hinting at that phase of life which is here openly pictured in revolting detail. The fact that it is the work which has established the fame of Sholom Asch in Russia, Germany and Austria, and that it tells a powerfully dramatic story and points a good moral, does not condone its offense. We must merely concede that the foreign stage is more frank than ours in its acceptance of themes long considered "taboo" for theatrical treatment and, thus conceding, maintain that justified attitude which debars these themes from our own playhouses.

The Play's Revolting Story.

The story of "The God of Vengeance," as told by Mr. Relkin's players to a large Olympic audience last night, makes plain the truth that it should never hope for English-speaking representation and that its performance in Yiddish should be forbidden in this country. It would have been well if even this one St. Louis production of the work had been prevented.

Jacob Shabsevitch, the central character of the play, is a Jewish peasant in Russian Poland, the son of a teamster, a "driver," the lowest figure in the Yiddish social scale. But his father had been a good and God-fearing Jew, and Jacob, married to a woman-trafficker in young girls and himself induced to embark in that appalling trade, feels its curse upon him and is filled with a piteous solicitude to safeguard his daughter Rivke, now growing into young womanhood, against its blight.

"I am a sinful man," he says. "My wife is a sinful woman. God will punish us both—we shall be sent to Hell—but my daughter, she is a pure girl—I must save my daughter!"

The "Scroll of the Law" Safeguard.

He will do so by invoking the direct intervention of Jehovah, through the medium of the synagogue itself, in behalf of Rivke—he will have written at great cost the Scroll of the Law—that most sacred writing so revered that, even if it fall to the floor by accident, all the Jews in the city must fast throughout one day for its purification—and this scroll he will place in Rivke's bedroom. It is to him even more than the Scroll of the Law—it is God himself, and surely it cannot fail to avert from his child the damnation incurred by her parents. Rivke is a pure girl—and the God of Israel is a merciful God.

"But He is also a revengeful God!" cries the venerable writer of the scroll, who, while not knowing the full extent of Jacob's sin, suspects that it is greater than has been told. And, with the sounding of this ominous note, the Scroll of the Law is delivered to the father, placed in the cover made for it by the daughter herself, and hung upon the wall in her bedroom.

The Tempting of the Daughter.

The Shabsevitches live on an upper floor of the house in the basement of which their nefarious enterprise is conducted, all communication between the two establishments being forbidden by the father. But, unknown to him, his lonely daughter, curious and companionless, has made a friend of one of the girls in the basement, who surreptitiously visits her, and, finally, the daughter herself is induced to steal down to the basement of nights and there associate with the women from whose sins her parents derive their revenue. She is encouraged in this by one of the older women, who is planning a rival establishment of her own and who seeks to make this daughter of Jacob Shabsevitch a tool in her house.

"Her mother was one of us for 15 years," this woman says. "Her father makes his money in the business—why hould she not become as we are?"

And so the curse falls upon Jacob Shabsevitch. His pure daughter, cunningly tempted by one of the basement girls in a scene indescribably appalling, and after being discovered and beaten by her horror-stricken father, flees with the woman who covets her beauty and youth and becomes one with the girls in whose souls and bodies her father and mother have trafficked and grown rich.

The Despair of Jacob Shabsevitch.

Jacob Shabsevitch, in his soul knowing evil and fearing God, breaks in mind and body under the punishment that has fallen upon him. In his despair he even reviles the sacred Scroll upon which he had placed his dependence for the saving of his daughter.

"She was purer than the Scroll of the Law itself!" he cries. "It was not she who sinned—why must it be she who suffers? God should punish me and my wife alone—I care not how—but not my daughter—not my daughter!"

The hardened mother, abetted by the go-between who had arranged for the writing of the Scroll of the Law, reasons with the remorse-stricken father that the wise thing is to pay for the recovery of his daughter and to arrange a marriage with some unsuspecting young man. It can easily be done—the girl will have a rich dowry—and then no one need ever be the wiser. The father consents, and the resourceful mother places herself in communication with the woman and man to whom the daughter had fled and the girl is brought home.

The Daughter's Taunting Confession.

The daughter's confession to her father is made poignantly revolting by her own reckless bearing. "I have done only what you and my mother have done!" she cries. "You have no right to forbid it!" And old Jacob Shabsevitch listens to her without raising his hand for further punishment—his wife and Reb Eli, the go-between, meanwhile hurrying to the scene the father of the prospective bridegroom, marriage to whom is to offer the girl the means of escape from further degredation.

But, in the final and crowning act, that of the meeting to arrange the marriage, Jacob Shabsevitch makes complete the punishment decreed by his God. In his soul he is honest. He will not give this defiled girl to a man who believes her pure. She is a lost soul—lost, even as those other girls in whom he has traded for these many years, and, just as he is about to cast to the ground the Scroll of the Law, saved from this act of sacrilege by the shuddering intervention of Reb Eli, Jacob woman—my daughter—my daughter!"

And the last curtain cuts off the mad shriekings of the father, now a maniac, huddling in a corner of the stage and Shabsevitch breaks down and tells the whole truth.

The Play's Appalling Finish.

"She is damned!" he shouts. "She is on her way to hell! Yes—yes—my daughter—my daughter whom you would take to be your wife—she is damned—a lost plucking at his beard, the mother, the daughter, the father of the prospective bridegroom, and Reb Eli, the go-between, cowering away from the appalling figure.

RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

"Girls" at the Garrick.

Clyde Fitch was in his merriest mood when he gave to the playgoing public the comedy "Girls," seen for the first time by a St. Louis audience at the Garrick Sunday evening. It is bright with humor, sparkling in repartee and amusing in situation.

The keynote is sounded in the first act, when the three girls swear an oath with drawn hatpins never to have anything to do with man, and then sing their "national anthem," "No Wedding Bells for Me." But mere man comes upon the scene. And then all is changed. The man is an intruder, unwelcome but persuasive. He is forced to leave, but the seed of discontent has been sown and the absence and loneliness of life without man has been felt. The society begins to weaken.

In the second act more men appear, and man begins the ascendency over the little band of manhaters. It is a pretty fight the girls wage, with the heart against prejudice and sex hatred. The heart conquers and mere man proves himself the stronger of the sex. The characters are all well drawn and the situations and scenes such as might be seen in every-day life.

The company presenting "Girls" is capable in every part and is a pleasing relief from the prevailing custom of presenting one star, with an unimportant and often incompetent support. Bessie Toner, Ethel Grey Terry and Suzette Jackson are excellent as the little band of man haters; Caroline Locke is pleasing as the flirt for whom any man will do; H. S. Northrup makes a dashing and persuasive lover and "buster of the Feminine Trust." Others in the cast are Mercelta Esmonde, Albert Grau, Hevlyn Benson, E. A. Locke, Fred Stanton, Pierre Young and Karl Knapp.

Madam, Why do You Risk Raw Milk?

You know there are myriads of germs in it. Perhaps they come from infected cows, from diseased milkmen, from unclean dairies. Why do you—who refuse raw meat—serve to your folks raw milk?

If you do it, it is simply because you don't know.

Nearly every grocer in your city is supplied with Van Camp's—the germless milk—the cleanest, richest milk in America.

If you don't use it, there can be but one reason. You never have tried it. You don't know the facts.

Please read them—then try the milk. Do as your neighbors are doing. There are few things more important to you than pure milk. Please don't, for lack of knowledge, go without it longer.

Milk Without Germs

Every drop of raw milk contains a myriad germs.

If the cow is tubercui. there are germs of Consumption. If the milkman is diseased, the milk is often infected. If the dairy is uncleanly, the very air is germ-laden.

When a disease germ gets into milk, it breeds millions like it.

Those are the chances you take when you use milkman's milk. You know not from where it comes. You never know what it contains.

But you do know, perhaps, that two-thirds the mortality of children is due to germ-infected milk.

There is not a germ of any kind in Van Camp's Milk. That fact has been proved a hundred times over.

Do you think it wise to serve impure milk when you can get milk like this?

20,000 Inspected Cows

Every day we milk 20,000 Holstein cows. Every cow is inspected. So are the men who milk them.

Our dairies are sanitary. Cleanliness is carried to extremes. Every condition is constantly watched.

Our buildings, where the milk is evaporated, are built without wood.

Here every means known to science is employed for your protection.

Then the milk is sterilized after the can is sealed. This makes it certain that no germ can exist in it.

The result is a milk that is safe. Is it wise to use a milk that is not?

That Delicious Flavor

The delicious flavor that Van Camp's gives to milk dishes is due to the fact that this is whole milk.

It is rich Holstein milk, with two-thirds the water evaporated. Nothing else is subtracted—nothing whatever is added.

This is not like condensed milk, which is half sugar—a milk that you can't use in cooking. Van Camp's is nothing but milk.

Yet you never have made from raw milk such delicious milk dishes as you will make from Van Camp's. The reason is, you don't get the whole milk from your milkman.

When he serves you from the top of the can, you get an excess of butter fat. For the butter fat rises. From the rest of the can, you get little butter fat, but an excess of solids. For the solids fall.

Your milk is never twice alike.

Analysis of Van Camp's shows about 30 per cent of solids, of which 8 per cent is butter fat. That means that you get the whole natural milk.

That is why Van Camp's, in your cooking, is so much better than raw milk. It is not because of anything added.

Six Cents Per Quart

One pint of Van Camp's, when you put back the water, makes about three pints of rich milk.

The cost of such milk, when you buy Van Camp's by the case, is about six cents per quart.

Six cents for a quart of whole, rich milk—milk without germs in it. Milk that is always the same—always fresh—always ready. Never a waste or shortage.

Van Camp's is as thick as thick cream. So thick that you add one part water for coffee. Yet it costs half what cream costs.

For Children

Van Camp's is the safe milk for babies—approved by the highest authorities.

With children, it will avoid the many bowel troubles caused by germ-infected milk.

The slight almond flavor, due to sterilization, is a flavor that children like. And it signifies purity—freedom from germs. Children can safely drink it.

But don't give them raw milk—any more than raw meat. There is too much danger of germ infection.

Van Camp's Milk comes in 5 and 10-cent cans—at your grocer's. Try one can and you will want it always. Then it is cheaper to buy by the case—also more convenient.

HOUSEKEEPER FOR THE LATE HENRY SHAW TAKES OWN LIFE

Mrs. Rebecca Edom-Wilson, who for 25 years was housekeeper for the late Henry Shaw, donor of the Missouri Botanical Gardens, killed herself by hanging at her home in Pittsfield, Ill., Saturday night. Her body was found hanging from a lattice work in the rear of the house by members of her family Sunday morning.

Mrs. Wilson was 71 years old. She was Mr. Shaw's nurse at the time of his death and had kept house for him in his downtown residence, where the Mercantile Club now stands, and another residence at Tower Grove, for a quarter of a century before.

She shared in her wealthy employer's estate, her principal legacies being a lot on Poplar street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, which she sold for $10,000, $5000 in cash and a life interest in a Shaw avenue house and in property at 610 Olive street.

The Shaw avenue property reverts to the Missouri Botanical Gardens and the Olive street property to St. Luke's Hospital.

MEN OUT OF A JOB BEGIN THEIR NATIONAL CONVENTION

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—An extraordinary gathering began here today. Delegates from various parts of the country to take part in a four-days' conference came on the brakebeams or on the "blind baggage." They profess to represent the country's workless and to constitute the first "National Convention of the Unemployed."

The National Committee of the Unemployed is the official name of the organization, of which J. Eads How of St. Louis is the head. How welcomed the delegates to the committee headquarters in Delaney street. Prominent men were invited to deliver addresses before the convention, among them President Roosevelt, William J. Bryan, William H. Taft and John E. Redmond. All declined.

DREAM RENEWS MOTHER'S SEARCH FOR MISSING SON

Possibly Will Prove Means of Restoring Boy With Sister 11 Years.

TALE OF FAMILY FEUD

Failure of Its Members to Write Brings Sorrow—Joy in Sight.

PERSONAL—Dear daughter: Bring Earle home, everything O. K. Father, Frank S. Hanna, 6115A Easton av. Want "Ad" in Sunday's Post-Dispatch.

Mrs. Frank S. Hanna had a dream last night. She dreamed that her daughter, Mrs. Della Vaughn, had come home, bringing Earl with her—Edward Earl Hanna, who was a bonnie 3-year-old boy when the daughter took him away from his mother 11 years ago and who is now a lad of 14.

She knew him, as he stood beside his sister at the door, changed though he was by the passing years, because Earl is her son and a mother does not forget. She clasped him in her arms—and awoke.

The dream-boy vanished but he left a hope in the heart of his mother. She thinks the dream was an omen and that before very long, in a waking moment, she will clasp the real boy in her arms.

It is a strange story of a groundless and futile family feud, of hearts breaking under years of yearning, of a fateful drifting nearer and a groping in the dark and a message of forgiveness throbbing with a great heart-hunger.

The Hanna family lived in Philadelphia. Della, the daughter, had married a traveling salesman, and had gone to make her home in Chicago. She returned home to be with her mother while the latter underwent a maternal crisis.

Takes Brother With Her.

When Baby Margaret was 10 days old, and she made ready to return to her home, she begged that Earl might go with her. She had always been very fond of him and had grieved over the separation from him. His mother demurred. It was such a long journey for such a little boy. But Mrs. Hanna had Baby Margaret to occupy her mind and heart and when Della pleaded and promised to take very good care of him the daughter and her brother disappeared.

They waited anxiously in the Philadelphia home for a letter from Chicago, but none came. Perhaps it was sent. The mother grieved and the father grew stern. She would have written, but he, embittered by the seeming heartlessness of the daughter, said they would wait until Della wrote.

When a letter finally was sent it was returned marked "not found." Anxiety deepened as time passed. The Chicago authorities were written to. The information that came was that the Vaughns had gone to California. The inquiry was pursued and the parents learned that Della and the boy were in New York. There all trace of them was lost.

In St. Louis Together.

Ten years passed and the Hannas and their daughter and son were in St. Louis but neither knew of the other's presence.

Mrs. Nannie Long died at a West End hotel. Her life had been surrounded by mystery. She was said to have a son at school. Her description made Mrs. Hanna believe that she was her daughter Della and that the boy in school was Earl. The inquiries that she made convinced her that she was mistaken, but the newspapers told of her quest.

Della probably read of her mother's efforts to find her and her heart was softened. She went to the neighborhood but she did not see her parents. But she saw a little girl come out of the house and start to school and she heard her playmates call her Margaret.

Last Wednesday Margaret was leaving the Hempstead School. A woman and a lad stood on the sidewalk.

"Is your name Margaret Hanna?" she asked.

"Yes."

"Is you papa living?"

"Yes."

"Is your mamma living?"

"Yes."

Pride Stifles Impulse.

The woman looked steadily, tenderly at her. She seemed to be striving with an impulse. But there was enough of the old pride or bitterness to stifle it. She slowly turned away.

"Who is that little girl?" Margaret heard the boy asked her as they walked away.

Margaret thinks she heard the woman say "sister."

She ran home and told what had occurred. The hearts of the parents were melted. The only way they could make it known was through a "personal" in the Post-Dispatch. They inserted the personal and now they are waiting for the mother's dream to come true.

After all these years they do not want to take Earl away from Della, but they want to see him and see her and in the mingling of their tears of joy to wash away the bitterness of the past.

GIRL ENDS HER LIFE AFTER QUARREL WITH SWEETHEART

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Sept. 28.—Miss Annice McComb, 22, drank three ounces of carbolic acid early yesterday and died in great agony five minutes after.

Miss McComb, who had a quarrel with her sweetheart, left a note giving her reason for committing suicide, that as no one cared for her she was tired of living and wanted to die. She resided with her sister east of this city.

REAL DAUGHTER OF REVOLUTION IS DEAD AT 76

Mrs. Amanda J. Lacey's Father Fought Under George Washington.

WAS AT VALLEY FORGE

Daughter, Born in Nashville, Tenn., Had Lived in St. Louis 36 Years.

Mrs. Amanda J. Lacey, said by her family to have been the last real daughter of the Revolution in St. Louis, died Sunday at noon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary A. Delunsch, 4409 West Belle place. She was 76 years old.

Lived Here Third of Century.

She was reared and educated in Nashville and was 40 years old when she came to St. Louis. She had lived here ever since. Her husband, William T. Lacey, a contractor, died several years ago. Since then she had lived with her daughter.

Death was caused by bronchitis, from which she had been suffering for some time.

Mrs. Lacey was a daughter of Ruben Rider, who served in the Army of Virginia under Gen. George Washington and underwent the rigors of Valley Forge. He participated in many of the famous battles of the Revolution, but was never sufficiently injured to be kept out of action. He served under Washington for the entire seven years of fighting, and then went to Nashville, Tenn., where his daughter was born, in 1832.

Mrs. Lacey drew a pension as a reward for her father's service to the nation.

The funeral will be held from the Delunsch residence Tuesday afternoon to St. Peter's Cemetery.

Besides Mrs. Delunsch there are three other daughters—Mrs. Jennie Grant, Mrs. Sarah Hines and Mrs. Rebecca Gift.

Ruben Rider was born in 1760 and was 16 years old when he entered the army. He was 72 years old when his daughter was born and was very hale and vigorous.

WRANGLE ABOUT CLEVELAND RECALLS "MORLEY FORGERY"

The doubt cast upon the authenticity of the late Grover Cleveland's last political document recalls the "Morley forgery," circulated to discredit James A. Garfield during his campaign for the presidency.

Garfield was nominated at Chicago in June, 1880. Shortly afterward a letter bearing his signature and addressed to H. L. Morley of the Employers' Union at Lynn, Mass., was circulated by his political opponents. In the letter Garfield was made to say that the Chinese treaty ought not to be abrogated or the immigration of Chinese laborers restricted until the wants of American employers were fully supplied.

The candidate proved that the letter was a forgery.

LEGISLATOR ACCUSES GOVERNOR

Swears Hanly of Indiana Offered Him Job for Vote.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 28.—Luther W. Knisely, member from De Kalb County of the lower house of the Indiana Legislature, signed an affidavit today in support of a charge made by him when he voted against the county option bill, that Gov. J. Frank Hanly had offered him a position paying $2000 if he would vote for the bill. The affidavit explains the alleged transaction, naming Senator Admire, a Republican, in connection with the charge. Gov. Hanly declined to make a statement.

The county option bill was passed by the House today and was signed by the Governor.

BRANDENBURG WROTE ARTICLE, BUT HAD NOTES

Author Says Cleveland Gave Him Ideas on Small Scraps of Paper.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—According to Broughton Brandenburg, who talked with the Post-Dispatch reporter at his home at Lake Hopatcong, there will be a conference in the office of the Times today whereat an effort will be made to clear up the mystery of the unfortunate Cleveland fake published by the Times and sold by the Times to other newspapers several weeks ago. Brandenburg said he would be present at this conference.

Brandenburg, in addition to his brief statement telegraphed the Post-Dispatch of yesterday that Mr. Cleveland had not actually penned the article, insisted that he obtained from the former president some of the notes—perhaps twenty in number—written on small pieces of paper in pencil, and from those he prepared the now celebrated statement.

Brandenburg asserts that after he had arranged these notes he took them to Mr. Cleveland, who signed them. He does not know where the notes are, stating that he left them in Mr. Cleveland's office at 1 Madison avenue. Mr. Hastings, the executor of the Cleveland estate, has been unable to find them.

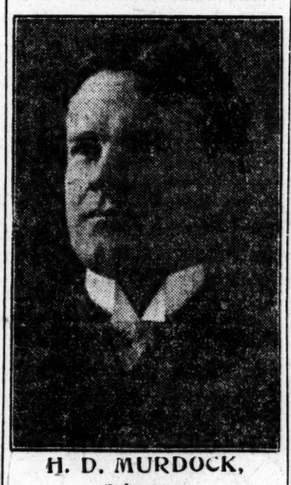

The date fixed by Brandenburg when he received the notes he alleges to have been given by Mr. Cleveland is March 5 and he says that some days later, not mentioning the exact date, he returned them to Mr. Cleveland, who at the same time signed the article which had been prepared by Brandenburg.

Brandenburg in his statement said of the article he had sold to the Times:

"I am the one person who knows all the facts absolutely, it seems, and I hereby declare that though I stand alone against the whole world I realize the responsibility unwittingly intrusted to my humble care and I will defend it to the finish."

DIAGRAM OF SECTION IN WHICH THE TERMINAL WANTS STREETS VACATED

HERE are the streets the Mayor's Terminal Commission proposes to grant to the Terminal Railway Co. without other compensation than the building of a $250,000 subway under Compton avenue, which will be the only thoroughfare through the district. Councilmen Norvell and Crunden have announced their opposition to the bill on the general principle that it is unwise to give away public streets without adequate compensation.

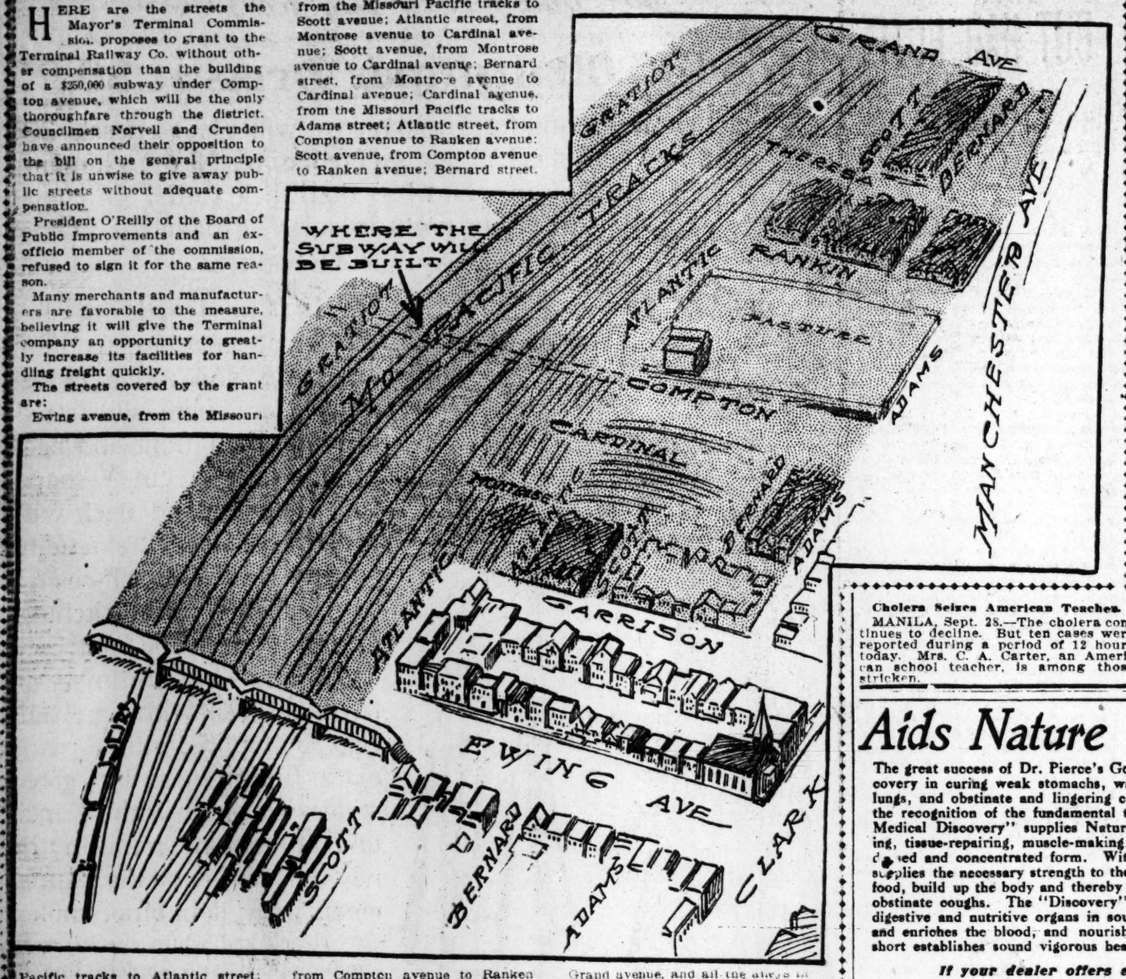

President O'Reilly of the Board of Public Improvements and an ex-officio member of the commission, refused to sign it for the same reason.

Many merchants and manufacturers are favorable to the measure, believing it will give the Terminal company an opportunity to greatly increase its facilities for handling freight quickly.

The streets covered by the grant are:

Ewing avenue, from the Missouri Pacific tracks to Scott avenue; Atlantic street, from Montrose avenue to Cardinal avenue; Scott avenue, from Montrose avenue to Cardinal avenue; Bernard street, from Montrose avenue to Cardinal avenue; Cardinal avenue, from the Missouri Pacific tracks to Adams street; Atlantic street, from Compton avenue to Ranken avenue; Scott avenue, from Compton avenue to Ranken avenue; Bernard street, from Compton avenue to Ranken avenue; Adams street, from Compton avenue to Ranken avenue; Ranken avenue, from the Missouri Pacific tracks to Manchester avenue; Scott avenue, from Theresa avenue to Grand avenue; Bernard street, from Theresa avenue to Grand avenue, and all the alleys in the blocks bounded by these thoroughfares.

The proposed subway will afford the only means of passing through the district if the plans are adopted.

ILLUMINATION OF TWO WEEKS FOR VEILED PROPHET

Preparations are now being made for the illumination of the downtown streets for Veiled Prophet week and the other fall festivities. A force of men was at work yesterday putting up the arches on Broadway and work will be started tomorrow on Fourth street.

A large number of firms and business men have already contributed to the illumination fund being raised by the Million Population Club.

The illumination will be continued for two weeks, beginning Oct. 5. Broadway will be lighted from Elm street to Washington avenue, and Fourth street will have arches from Market street to Washington avenue. Merchants on Olive street are considering a plan to illuminate that thoroughfare from Fourth street to Twelfth street. It is probable also that Twelfth street will be illuminated from Olive street to Washington avenue.

Committees in charge of the work are: Broadway, Goodman King, Charles W. Nugent, A. E. Faust and F. C. Lake; Fourth street, Harry Prufrock, Emil Homer and N. Newcomb; Twelfth street, Dan Hill, Lyman T. Hay and August Frank; Market street, Ed Koeln, D. Nicholson and Thomas House; Olive street, E. G. Lewis, Otto F. Karbe, James H. McTague and C. F. Wenneker.

The Label Parade will be eliminated this year, on account of the preparations for the celebration of the Centennial of the incorporation of St. Louis, to be held in 1909.

LEMP NEED NOT BE SPECIFIC IN DIVORCE SUIT COMPLAINT

Brewer Wins Every Point Except Concerning Identity of Wife's Sister.

According to rulings by Judge Kinsey Monday in the divorce case of Mrs. Lillian Handlan Lemp against William J. Lemp, president of the Lemp Brewing Co., it will not be necessary for Mr. Lemp in supporting his cross-bill to amend his petition to show what are the household duties of a millionaire's wife.

Neither will he be required to tell the name of the man whom his wife, as stated in his petition, wrote a letter of admiration.

He will not be required to explain in just what particular her manner of dress was offensive to him or in what way her alleged high temper was manifested. Neither will he have to go into the details of the ante-nuptial agreement by which he was to have supervision over the religious training of their offspring.

Only in one point did Judge Kinsey decide in favor of Mrs. Lemp in her effort to have the allegations in the cross-bill made more specific. He ruled that Mr. Lemp must specify which of Mrs. Lemp's sisters it was whose visits to his home were offensive to him.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in concentrated and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

LAUNCH SINKS; 7 ARE MISSING; OWNER IS HELD

Rich Host, Only One to Escape Drowning, Is Suspected by Police.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Seven men of a party of eight are believed to have been drowned in the Calumet River last night when the pleasure launch Lemon struck one of the supports of the Nickel Plate Railroad bridge in the river and, turning over, sank.

One of the men in the craft, Elmer Westergren, was seated at the stern of the boat and, after he was thrown into the water, he swam to the shore. Westergren's brother-in-law, Frick, is believed to be one of the victims. Westergren seemed distracted and refused to give the names of the others. According to information given to the police at Irondale early today, the men drowned were:

OTTO YUNKER,
GEORGE HESSEN,
PETER DUNCAN,
JOHN FRICK,
JOSEPH SEEBLOOM,
JOHN ZINKE,
GEORGE LOUIE.

The Lemon was an 18-foot gasoline launch. Westergren, the owner, lives at South Chicago. The boat started from South Chicago and was on its way to Riverdale, about eight miles away. Because of the high wind which prevailed, causing a strong current in the river, some difficulty was experienced in running the boat.

Boat Turns Over, Sinks.

As it reached the bridge it was thrown against one of the supports and turned over, sinking after it had cleared the west end of the bridge.

Westergren was in the stern and he alone escaped. His friends were unaware of the danger until the craft sank, without warning, carrying the seven men down with it. None of the bodies was recovered.

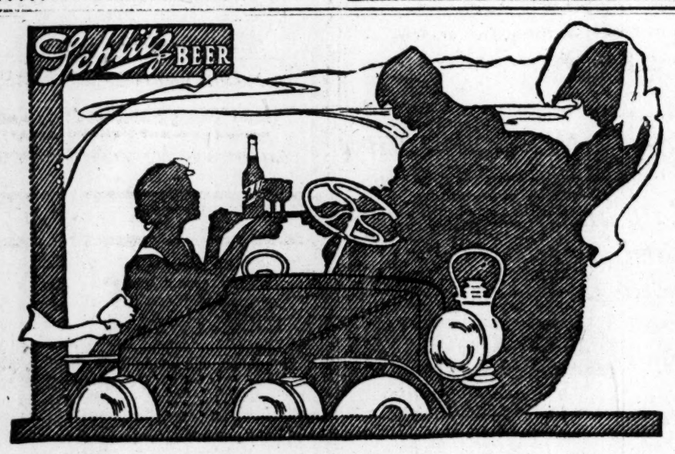

Westergren, who is said to be wealthy, refused to tell the police the destination of the boat other than to say they were taking a little ride up the river. He acted suspiciously and will be held by the police.

ROOSEVELT NOT WILLING TO TELL OF CONTRIBUTIONS

He Assures Bryan He Favors Publicity of Fund After the Election.

OF AID TO OPPOSITION

Fears Bryan and Others Would Take Unfair Advantage of Information.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—President Roosevelt's reply to Mr. Bryan's recent telegram, made public today, is about three times as long as the telegram. Mr. Roosevelt says:

To show the difference between deeds and words, I will compare the records of this administration with the record of one of your most prominent supporters, at the moment, Mr. Olney, Attorney-General under the last Cleveland administration. While Mr. Olney was Attorney-General, no cases whatever were brought under the anti-trust law against combination of capital, the only new cases which he brought being directed against combinations of workingmen. During that entire administration the only cases brought against combinations of capital under the anti-trust act were four in number, two of which were unsuccessful; one of the other two being the case which was decided by Judge Taft in favor of the Government.

Under this administration a mass of such cases have been brought, including the case against the Northern Securities Co.; against the beef packers; against the Federal Salt Co.; against the General Paper Co.; against the Otis and other elevator companies; against the American Tobacco Co.; against the Powder Trust; against the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co.; against the Standard Oil Co., and others.

Government Has Not Failed.

In a number of these cases the Government has already succeeded by injunctions and otherwise. Some of the cases are now pending. In hardly any important case against great law-breaking corporations has the Government yet suffered final defeat.

As regards suits to suppress railway abuses: Under the last Democratic administration there were no indictments against the shippers for receiving rebates or secret rates. Under my administrations there have been 49 indictments for secret rebates, resulting in 18 convictions, and in only four cases have these indictments failed.

The other 27 cases are still pending. Among the railroads which have been convicted are the Chicago & Alton, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the New York Central, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, while scores of cases are still pending against other leading railroads.

Among the shippers that have been convicted are some of the greatest corporations in the United States, as, for instance, the American Sugar Co., the aggregate fine actually paid being more than $150,000; Swift & Co., Armour Packing Co., the Cudahy Packing Co., Nelson Morris & Co., each of whom was fined $15,000, and the cases have now been carried to the Supreme Court. The Standard Oil case is still pending.

Record of Achievement.

This is a record of actual achievement and beside it mere promises are empty indeed, and they would not be made now with any possibility of performance, resulting, if it were not for the achievement above recited.

You state that the steel company, with my express consent, purchased one of its largest rivals and thus obtained control of over 50 per cent of the total output. This action of the steel company (which increased its share of the total output by only about 4 per cent and in no way altered the standing of the company under the law) may have been a violation of your plan, the absurdity of which has been exposed by Gov. Hughes.

But there was no violation of the law. I was cognizant of the entire transaction. It was not entered into by the steel corporation of its own desire, but solely at the urgent requests of the corporation purchased and of the big banks holding that corporation's securities, in order to enable them to prevent a crash which would have turned the panic of last fall into the most widespread disaster. I should indeed have been derelict in my duty if I had not so acted and efficiently used all the power of the Government where it could be legally and properly used (as it was in this case) to see that the panic was kept within the smallest possible radius and the damage caused as slight as possible.

Judge Priest for Bryan.

You ask me to name a single official connected with a law-defying corporation who has declared or will declare that he is supporting you. In a St. Louis paper which reaches me at the same time that the papers containing this published letter of yours, I find a statement from Judge Henry S. Priest, attorney for the Waters-Pierce Oil Co., the Western subsidiary or representative of the Standard Oil Co., in which he announces that he is for Bryan and states that Wall street believes that Bryan will be elected. In response to the question as to whether he could quote any of the Standard Oil magnates as feeling that way, he answered:

"I did not say I saw any of the officials of the Standard Oil Co. I am giving you what I found was the drift of opinion among well-posted politicians as well as bankers. * * * I guess Gov. Haskell is all right. They have not proved anything on him, have they?"

The newspaper clipping goes on to say:

"Judge Priest was one of the lawyers who fought Attorney-General Hadley in the State's ouster suit against the Waters-Pierce and Republic Oil companies. His legal practice is chiefly with the big corporations and his firm is counsel for the United Railways Co. and the North American interests in St. Louis. Judge Priest is credited with originating the phrase, 'Bribery is a conventional offense,' which he used in an argument at the trial of R. M. Snyder, the Kansas City millionaire, now dead."

You say that the trust magnates know their own interests and are supporting Judge Taft. So far as their interests are simply interests of the business community, and especially of the wage-workers, I believe they will support Judge Taft. So far as they have special interests which are to them more important than the general business welfare, I believe they will support you. I base this belief upon what happened in 1896. Your success then would, in my belief, have been a calamity for the country from the standpoint of the welfare of the business men, farmers and workingmen, just as, in my belief, your success now would be a calamity to the country, both from the standpoint of business (and especially of the interests of the wage-worker), and from the standpoint of morals.

Bryan's 1896 Campaign Fund.

One of your supporters, the New York World, in February last printed a list of contributions to your campaign of 1896, containing the names of individuals and corporations owning silver mines, who made contributions to the aggregate of $235,000, one of these contributions being of $159,000 and another of $45,000, etc., etc.

Now for your proposal. You have yourself furnished its condemnation. You have quoted the contributions furnished to Gov. Hughes as giving reasons to distrust Gov. Hughes' attitude toward contributions, and I am obliged to say that you cannot be sincere on your part, for you well know what the Governor's attitude has been throughout his term. You quote the contribution of Mr. Harriman to my campaign, though you know well that it did not affect any action taken by me as against Mr. Harriman, and ask if it would not have affected the campaign if known.

Thereby you have furnished an excellent reason for refusing to meet your proposal, for you make it evident that to adopt your proposal would give to every man who cared merely for partisan success the chance by precisely the argument you have now made to create to more purpose the false impression that you are now seeking to create. Mr. Taft's position, Mr. Taft's acts on the bench and in the executive service show that he could not be swayed in any shape or way by any consideration save the public interest, and the fact of a man's contributing or failure to contrioute would not in any way affect his action any more than it has influenced my action or the action of Gov. Hughes.

Publicity After Election.

I emphatically approve of the publication of campaign expenses after election, whether provided for by law or not. You have shown by this letter that, if the contributions to Mr. Hughes' campaign fund had been made public before election, you and those who act with you would have striven to give the false impression that Mr. Hughes was unfit to be intrsuted with the position of Governor; and you have shown by this letter of yours that, if Mr. Harriman's contribution to the campaign fund of 1904 (and, incidentally, I may mention that I am informed that this particular contribution was not used for the national campaign, but in the New York State campaign) had been known before election, you and your supporters would have endeavored to use the fact of its having been made as an insincere and untruthful argument to show that I could not be trusted to deal out exact justice to Mr. Harriman. No stronger argument against your proposition has yet been advanced than this, that you have thus unconsciously advanced.

I now come to the important part of your letter, your attitude toward Mr. Haskell. You state that Mr. Haskell has voluntarily resigned from the committee. You speak highly of the public service which he has rendered and protest against any condemnation of him, except such as may come in a court.

Now all the great financial magnates who then contributed to your campaign fund would have preferred business prosperity to business adversity, other things being equal; but they would rather have had the immense profit that would have accrued to them from the free coinage of the 50-cent dollar than the smaller profit which would have accrued to them merely from the general industrial prosperity of the country. Because of their personal interests and against the interests of the community at large, these "trust" magnates then supported you.

My belief is—and the statement of Judge Priest quoted above and the attitude of many men of large financial interests warrant me in expressing the belief—that those trust magnates, whose fear of being prosecuted under the law by Mr. Taft is greater than their fear of general business adversity under you, will support you and not Mr. Taft.

Refuses Publicity Proposition.

I now come to what you have to say as to contributions, and here you furnish your own answer. You state that it appears from the published statement of the contribution to Mr. Hughes' campaign for Governor two years ago that various men of wealth, some of them connected with big corporations, whom you name, to the number of nine, contributed from $20,000 to $500 apiece. You ask: "Would the fact that these gentlemen contributed to his campaign fund strengthen or weaken his testimony against the reasonableness of our anti-trust remedy?" and later you continue by asking: "Are you willing to say that any public interest was served in 1904 by concealing until after the election the contributions made to the Republican Campaign Committee by Mr. Harriman and those collected by him for others? Are you willing to say that the publication before election to the contribution than made would have had no effect on the election?" You then propose to publish the names of contributors before election and ask us to do the same.

The amounts you mention as contributed to Mr. Hughes are utterly trivial compared to the amounts I have already mentioned as contributed to your campaign in 1896; but in my judgment the amount contributed has nothing whatever to do with the point at issue. The question was, for instance, whether Mr. Clark of Montana, when he contributed heavily to your campaign had a proper motive and whether your actions would or would not have been influenced properly or improperly by that contribution; and the same question applies to Mr. Hughes and to me. In the case of Mr. Hughes and myself the answer is fortunately easy.

Records Make Answer.

You have nothing to do but examine our records inthe office to which we were both elected. You either know or ought to have known before writing that not in one instance has Mr. Hughes done anything of the kind or sort or description for the contributors you mention, or for any other contributor to his fund, which ought not to have been done, and would not have been done if no contribution had been made. Yet you clearly imply that he is and has been improperly influenced by the fact of these contributions having been made. Do you consider such an implication either straightforward or sincere?

Out of your own mouth you are condemned. You thereby set up that standard of law "honesty" which has been the bane of this people in endeavoring to get equity and fair dealing—as they should obtain among high-minded men—from great business corporations and from individuals like Mr. Haskell. Apparently you disclaim even asking Mr. Haskell to retire from the position in which you placed him, so that he retires of his own free will; and you utter no word of condemnation of his gross offenses against public decency and honor. On the contrary, you strive to make it appear that his misconduct in regard to the Standard Oil Co. is all of which he is accused; whereas, shameless though this particular act of his is, it is no worse than countless others in his career.

No Bryan Censure for Haskell.

I contrast your action in this case with that of Mr. Taft's statement when the question of his nomination was at stake was that he would rather not accept it at the price of sacrificing principle by supporting Mr. Foraker for Senator. You do not venture in so much as the slightest possible manner even to censure Mr. Haskell for his manifold misdeeds; and you ask that he be held guiltless of them unless convicted in a court of law; although you well know that as regards the worst of them no action in a court of law would lie.

You say you were ignorant of Mr. Haskell's record. If so, it was willful ignorance on your part. I call your attention to the letter of Mr. L. T. Russell, the editor of the Morning Democrat of Ardmore, Ok., in which, writing to you on Sept. 24, 1908, he states:

"If you were ignorant of such charges it is because you refused to read them when presented, when you visited Oklahoma last fall in the interest of Candidate Haskell. At that time I personally presented to you 10 typewritten pages of charges against Mr. Haskell, covering his operations in Ohio, New York, Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma. * * * The charges recently made by Mr. Hearst were all made by me at that time."

Courts to Deal With Him.

You ask that we leave the courts to deal with Mr. Haskell. As to some matters, the courts have already dealt with him. As to others, various private individuals whom he has wronged, and the United States Government, on behalf of helpless Indians whom he has wronged, are striving to have the courts to deal with him. Mr. M. L. Nott, National Attorney for the Creek Nation, writes me as follows:

"In October, 1906, Mr. Foulke of Richmond, Ind., was sent to investigate the matter of the townsite frauds in the Creek Nation. Mr. Foulke's report is in the hands of the Secretary of the Interior. All parties connected with these townsite frauds have used the same means and methods. Upon the report filed by Mr. Foulke, I, as attorney for the Creek Nation, was directed by the Secretary of the Interior to file suits in equity for the cancellation where the same had been secured by fraud.

"Proceeding upon instructions, and after full investigation, I found that Gov. C. N. Haskell, among others, had secured deeds to quite a number of lots in Muskogee by conspiracy and fraud; that he had had these lots scheduled in the names of 'dummies,' or 'straw' men, who lived in the State of Ohio and elsewhere, and then had them quitclaim back to him without consideration. By this dishonest means he succeeded in getting deeds to a large number of lots belonging to the Creek Indians at one-half their appraised value.

"I have filed quite a number of suits against Gov. Haskell, in which conspiracy and fraud is charged, and the manner of consummating it is set out in detail. Haskell has not filed any answer in any of these cases. He has simply, through his attorney, filed dilatory motions, such as demurrers, pleading to the jurisdiction, etc. He dare not answer and deny the allegations set up in our bill; such an answer would be a sworn lie and known to be by the large number of 'straw' men and 'dummies' he used in perfecting the fraud."

Haskell's New York Record.

For this particular act of the man whose public record you indorse you may rest assured that the Interior Department will endeavor to see that the courts do "justice" to him.

When Mr. Haskell was in New York various judgments were filed against him. I will not at the moment discuss the charges of perjury and fraud made against him by Attorney Albert H. Walker of New York in connection with the suit decided by Judge Lacombe in March, 1902. But the records of the County Court of New York County show that on Feb. 21, 1900, a judgment for damages and costs amounting to $42,-285.43, recovered in the Supreme Court of the county, was filed against Charles M. Haskell. On April 2, 1900, this judgment was returned on the Sheriff's execution satisfied to the extent of only $29.80, and the remainder of it remains still unsatisfied. In this instance your proposal that Mr. Haskell be left to the court does not seem to have produced thorough-going justice.

Neither shall I touch upon the various suits of all kinds now pending against him for all kinds of reasons. Thus, it is reported in the press, under date of Sept. 19, 1908, that a $500 judgment had been obtained against Mr. Haskell by an attorney of Arkansas who was employed by him "to lobby before the City Council of Muskogee to get through a franchise. The attorney's fee was never paid, but the franchise was granted."

Nor again shall I touch upon the facsimile published in the press of Sept. 25 last, showing Mr. Haskell having three years ago joined an organization to prevent union labor from entering the city in which he lived. Indeed, as regards this last statement, I wish distinctly to acquit Mr. Haskell of being opposed on principle to either trade unions or corporations; for I wish to acquit him of being opposed on principle to anything.

Federal Grant to Standard Oil.

Now as to Gov. Haskell's connection with the Standard Oil Co. in Oklahoma. Gov. Haskell advances the fact that the United States Government permitted the Standard Oil Co. on the same terms as any and all other companies to enjoy the the legal provisions to which it was entitled on the Indian reservations of Oklahoma, as his justification for having given it illegal privileges to which it was not entitled in the State of Oklahoma.

The excuse furnishes the measure of Gov. Haskell's moral quality. The Federal act of March 14, 1904, conferred upon the Secretary of the Interior the right to grant permits for oil and gas pipe lines to cross Indian reservations. Reservations to carry out the law were drawn up by the Secretary of the Interior April 12, 1904, on compliance with the law and the regulations of the Department of the Interior permitted the Standard Oil Pipe Line Co. (the Prairie Oil and Gas Co., the Cary River Gas Co., the Dense Portland Cement Co., and others, including Texas and gulf companies), all on the same terms and under the same conditions, the right of way across the Indian reservation.

No preference or privilege was granted to any company that was not also granted to all the others. Any other action than that actually taken by the Interior Department would have been as grossly improper as the actions of Gov. Haskell himself. The Government stood neither for nor against any company; but it required each to obey the law. Its action was precisely like the action which it took, for instance, in proceeding against the Standard Oil Co. in the rebate matter; it did not thus proceed because the Standard Oil Co. was involved, but because rebates had been granted; it would have proceeded just as quickly against the rivals of the Standard Oil as against the Standard Oil itself. Our only concern was to punish any guilty party. Our effort is to do equal justice to all and to exact justice from all alike. We are no more to be swayed from this course by desire to punish a corporation than by desire to favor it, no matter whether it is the Standard Oil or any other.

The Oklahoma Controversy.

The permit of the National Government, as set forth in the telegram of the Secretary of the Interior to Gov. Haskell of April 22 last, was merely to cross or use the restricted allotments and tribal property of the Indians. It had nothing to do with the question of compliance with the laws of the State of Oklahoma, and conferred no privilege to cross territory in Oklahoma outside of these reservations. Gov. Haskell refuses to permit any proceedings to be taken against the Standard Oil Co., although this company declines to obey the law of Oklahoma. He claims that the Standard Oil's rights were superior to the requirements of the Oklahoma constitution, for which he was himself mainly responsible. He took the decision of this question away from the courts and, against the opinion of his Attorney-General, he decided it in favor of the Standard Oil corporation. The Attorney-General of Oklahoma has made the following statement in this matter:

"The President's statement as to the Prairie Oil and Gas Co. suit is less than the whole matter in its whole iniquity, because on the 23d of April I had informed the Governor that the action taken by the Prairie company was illegal and should be enjoined, and that I had an open injunction suit. At that time, April 23, the Governor agreed with me as to the illegality of the action and approved the bringing of the injunction.

"The same day the Governor left the State to go to Denver the Prairie company started its trespass. This, I believe, was prearranged between the Governor and the Prairie company, as the Prairie company rushed the laying of its pipe line during the absence of the Governor from the State.

Ordered Suit Dismissed.

"I wired the Governor on the 1st of July, asking whether he had given the Prairie Oil Co. permission to build their line. His reply evaded my sole question, and, instead of answering it, he said that he was satisfied that the Prairie Oil Co. would not violate the law.

"Between the 22d of April and the 2d of July Gov. Haskell received no advice from me as his legal adviser as to the matter, and if he had received advice from his assistant Attorney-General he did not do me the honor of submitting the same to me.

"When he heard of the bringing of the suit he directed the acting Governor to order me to dismiss the suit, and indulged in insolent language to the effect that he would not tolerate any proceeding by me except at his direction. The use of this insulting language regarding me, together with his sudden change of heart between April and July, evidences that some very deep and controlling motive of a personal nature was back of his action.

"The only person that the prohibitions could help was the Standard Oil Co., and that he hazarded as much as he did for them as he did after his sudden change of heart supplies the necessary factor for any intelligent man to reckon whether the Governor of Oklahoma has a leaning toward the Standard Oil Co.; and, therefore, the President's statement seems to me a very mild rebuke.

"CHARLES E. WEST.
"Attorney-General of Oklahoma."

Discrimination Is Seen.

The national Government, obeying both the law and the principles of sound morality, discriminated neither for nor against the Standard Oil Co. or its rival. Gov. Haskell, against the law and every principle of honesty anu fair dealing, discriminated in favor of the Standard Oil corporation. Failure to see the distinction between the two cases indicates moral rather than mental obtruseness.

I believe in radical reform, and the movement for such reform can be successful only if it frowns upon the demagogue as it does upon the corruptionist; if it shows itself as far removed from government by a mob as from government by a plutocracy. Of all corruption, the most far-reaching for evil is that which hides itself behind the mask of furious demagogy, seeking to arouse and to pander to the basest passions of mankind. No better exemplification of this type of corruption could be found than in the case of Mr. Haskell.

You have uttered no word of condemnation of Haskellism as we thus see it. That you consciously sought to bring it about I do not believe. That it was the natural result of the effort to apply in practice your teachings, I have no question. Yours truly.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Hon. William Jennings Bryan, Lincoln, Neb.

Taft Refuses His Approval.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 28.—Mr. Taft was asked by a staff correspondent of the Post-Dispatch if he approved President Roosevelt's course in engaging in the controversy with Bryan and if he were elected whether he would conduct himself on similar lines in the next campaign.

Mr. Taft answered at once: "Just say that you asked me that question and I declined to answer."

HASKELL WILL SUE HEARST

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 28.—A special to the Times from Guthrie, Ok., says: Gov. Haskell announced on his arrival here last night from Chicago that he would bring suit against William R. Hearst next Wednesday.

"For criminal libel, Governor?"

"Well, I don't know what you would call it."

"To make him prove what he said?"

"No, sir; to make him prove that what he said was not true."

LET THE DELEGATES KNOW.

Action on two bills—the city lighting bill which provides for competition in municipal lighting contracts and the fair grounds purchase bill—shows an improved disposition on the part of the House of Delegates. Both bills are important and have been long delayed. The House's action on them was brought about by persistent popular pressure.

The result of persistent pressure in the case of these two bills shows that the House is susceptible to public opinion. Its combine yields to proven insistent public demand.

The proof of the effectiveness of unmistakable evidence of public demand is a hint to the people of the surest way of getting action on the cheap gas measure. When the people of the wards make it clear to their delegates that they want action on the gas question, they will get it.

Let your Delegate know your sentiments on cheap gas.

Isn't the President in danger of becoming winded before the home-stretch is reached?

SNUBBING THE PIG IRON KINGS.

The fall may have been tardy elsewhere, but it seems that an early frost has visited certain sections of Pittsburg, being the fashionable quarters. It blew in from over New York way, arriving simultaneously with the Vanderbilt party that came over to attend the horse show.

To anybody except the obtuse and obtrusive millionaires of Pittsburg it ought to be perfectly apparent that people of taste might care to visit Pittsburg for the purpose only of seeing the horses. One travels to a town to see its distinctive and not its commonplace features—and there are some really admirable and classy horses in Pittsburg.

But, wholly unmindful of this and other evident distinctions, the inhabitants crowded around the New York party in a manner that threatened to obscure their view. Effusive and flashy millionaires, representing the local "smart set," pressed the visitors with invitations, got up a "grand ball" in their honor and all that sort of thing—to all of which they were obliged to send polite regrets. The pig-iron kings are good-hearted creatures and seem unable to understand that people cannot accept their generous attentions. Their manner of overwhelming the visitor recalls that of the dusky natives of Samoa, whom Robert Louis Stevenson loved so much.

And at the horse show the poor innocents surged into the box of the visitors, where they were permitted to stand in the rear, so as not to disturb the view of the horses, but were not pressed to sit down. After standing around awhile, it dawned on some of them that the horses were the attraction, and they began to realize the delicate chill in the atmosphere.

In time to com these simple creatures, through painful lessons, may come to perceive where they stand and know something of the meaning of "class consciousness."

Jack Frost is beginning his fall campaign rather late, but he may put plenty of snap into it while it lasts.

OUR FRIENDS THE COUNTRY EDITORS.

At the recent banquet of bucolic journalists one of their number, while complimenting themselves, lightly commiserated their metropolitan brethern, saying "there never was an editor or a reporter on a city newspaper who did not wish some day to have a little country paper of his own."

Yes—some day. Some day after all of the interesting things have died out of the great centers; some day when all of the great work shall have been done and the battles fought and the issues decided; some day when Utopia eliminates news and the millions no longer need papers, and the country itself ceases to turn to the city to find out what has been happening at home; some day when science has rendered country journalism absolutely and purely mechanical so that it requires not a thought or a moment from the editor; and when the rapid transit shall have reduced space to a mere abstraction and the city will be so convenient that the country editor can while away all his spare time there—then we all hope to have little country papers of our own that will print themselves.

But we are not belittling the country papers of the present era, even though they are not automatic. Theirs is a noble function and they perform it grandly. That is because the foremen or the printers stay on the job and dig up copy somehow and keep things going. We have always been delighted to observe, and we shall continue to be delighted to observe that the place to always find the country editor is right in the heart of the city. When you want to know what is going on in the city ask the country editor. He knows more about the city than the city editor any day in the week.

Altogether the most metropolitan and cosmopolitan, the most "citified" and sophisticated gentlemen to be found anywhere in the world are our good warm friends and esteemed contemporaries, the country editors, to whom once more we extend the gladdest of glad hands.

We could not run the city papers without the constant aid and presence of our country friends.

PLUTOCRACY IN OHIO AND MISSOURI.

As Senator Foraker's statement of Sept. 25, sent out from Cincinnati, gives his correspondence with John D. Archbold in the deal for "taking over" the Ohio State Journal, it is conclusive evidence that the $50,000 of Standard Oil money supplied by Archbold to Senator Foraker, was in no sense a bribe offered to Foraker.

When it was found that the paper could not then be taken over under the plan proposed, Senator Foraker returned the money. He took no fee or percentage from it for his work. He was not bribed. His letter of May, 1906, in reply to one from Archbold, shows him declining to accept a retaining fee from the Standard Oil Co. in its Ohio litigation because of his duties in the Senate.

If the publication of his letters, as they were given out by William R. Hearst, had made the point for argument now the probability that Senator Foraker had accepted a bribe, his statement now would show that no such probability had existed either on the showing as made by the Hearst letters or on any other.

Now, as always in the minds of intelligent observers of public events, the assumption of such a probability in the case of Senator Foraker is absurd. He was not retained by the Standard Oil Co., or by any other client of that kind except after having made his reputation as an eminent lawyer, a lawyer of senatorial rank. Such lawyers do not accept bribes in the United States Senate or elsewhere.

Coming back, however, from all this, which is a mere disgression in Senator Foraker's case, the important points in his case, as he himself has presented it, remain exactly as they were before.

When he is on his way to his present service in the United States Senate, it is the way opened for him by his service as the attorney of the Standard Oil Co. The fees he takes are attorney's fees, not bribes. They are strictly lawful as well as legal. But as he becomes the servant of the Standard Oil interests thus, his promotion to the Senate follows. It follows logically as a result of the system of control in Ohio politics.

He takes no Standard Oil money as United States Senator. But he represents gratuitously his Standard Oil constituency when its interests are in conflict with those of the State of Ohio.

If he negotiates a deal by which $50,000 of Standard Oil money is to be used to take over an important Ohio newspaper secretly, that it may serve the interests of the monopoly secretly while pretending to serve those of the people of Ohio, the fact that he makes no charge and accepts no fee does not exonerate him.

If when the Attorney-General of Ohio is pressing a suit to enforce the laws of Ohio against the Standard Oil Co., in practices alleged to be lawless, he intervenes and defeats the purposes of the suit and of the law back of it, the fact that this service is rendered to the Standard Oil Co., without the payment of a fee to him, does not make him a United States Senator fit to be trusted with the guardianship of the rights and the interests of the people of Ohio.

The question in his case is still the same as in the closely related cases of other United States senators with records which parallel it closely.

In the case of United States Senator Stone of Missouri, no one who is intelligent enough to understand the course of public affairs would believe a charge of bribery if it had been made. There is no such implication in the main points of the record, as made in Missouri, which coincide with and explain Ohio history.

If in the case of the Continental Tobacco Co., the laws of Missouri are used for private purposes, so that the Attorney-General of Missouri is foiled as was the Attorney-General of Ohio, William J. Stone, as an attorney, holding then no public office, is representing the interest of a client and violating no law in doing it. Nor did Senator Foraker. But if the power of monopoly is confirmed, the public interests suffer if the anti-trust law is defeated thus both in Missouri and Ohio, we have a parallel case.

Senator Stone is not suspected of taking monopoly money for his action in the United States Senate. When he is held above this suspicion, as is Senator Foraker, by all intelligent people, we have another parallel, which is continued, if when on the way to the United States Senate, both are found as attorneys, serving trust interests for attorney's fees. On the record in Ohio, Senator Foraker admits that he was the well paid attorney of the Standard Oil trust before he went to the Senate. On the record in Missouri, there is an admission from William J. Stone that as an attorney for the Missouri Health Society (or the National Health Society) he wrote the argument on "Alum and Poison" intended to control the Missouri Legislature. On the public record as it now stands, his employment by the Health society is part of the operation of the "Baking Powder Trust." When the record has in it also William J. Stone's testimony that he made no special charge for that special service, it is once more a parallel to the gratuitous services rendered by Foraker in Ohio under the general conditions of his connection with monopolies.

No bribes were offered in taking over the Kansas City Times in Missouri or the State Journal in Ohio. If in Missouri the money used to take over the Kansas City paper is monopoly money supplied or expected from public service corporations in St. Louis and Kansas City, as was testified by Editor Groves, we have a parallel for Foraker's action in the case of the State Journal when the Kansas City Times is being taken over to further William J. Stone's progress to the United States Senate.

The parallel extends beyond such incidents. It extends beyond Missouri and Ohio to the operations of the same system everywhere. Plutocracy as it gains control of the avenues of promotion, does not bribe men who are able, intelligent and popular enough to serve its purposes in the highest public office. It blocks their way until they accept its private service under its own conditions. Promoted afterwards to the United States Senate or to any other office, they cannot break away and return to the service of the people. They are not paid by Plutocracy in the Senate, but by the people. It is the interests of Plutocracy they serve, while being paid by the people. This is the final point of parallelism which may be found in Ohio and Missouri history and in the history of every State where Plutocracy has attempted to establish its control as a permanent system.

Foraker doesn't believe in a "moral awakening." Still, unconsciously, he is a good deal of a reformer himself.

When a treasurer of any kind quits under fire it might not be altogether amiss to look into his accounts.

If his portraits do not flatter him, Mr. J. D. Archbold is a truly good man.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

To Stop Inhumanity to Horses.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

"A Reader" complains of inhuman treatment of horses. If "A Reader" is a resident of St. Louis, he, or she, must have heard that there is a Humane Society here, that does a large amount of work in the protection of children and dumb animals. A telephone message to John H. Holmes, secretary of the society, will always meet with a response and prompt arrest of the cruel parties, and he also will acknowledge all donations, which is the society's principal source of revenue.

E. HAYDEN,
Chairman Executive Committee, Humane Society of Missouri.

True Presbyterians.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I notice in your "Answers to Readers," you state: "Members of Roman Catholic, Episcopal, Presbyterian, German Lutheran, Unitarian, Universalist, Christian Science and Spiritualist churches dance and attend amusements." I beg to say that you have made an error in including Presbyterians in this list, for no true Presbyterian would dance or attend amusements, if by that you mean theaters, gardens, etc.

A PRESBYTERIAN.

Where the U. R. May Lose.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

This is one of the amusing things that may occur on the pay-as-you-enter cars: Residing east of Broadway, I might some Sunday, or other morning, decide to take a round-trip ride on the Olive line for an airing, going to the end of the line and remaining in the car until it returns to the point at which I entered it. I pay my nickel when I enter the car, but remain aboard and therefore do not re-enter it, and unless the conductor leaves his cage and demands payment, or he and the motorman drive me out, so as to compel me to again enter the car, how can any additional fare be collected from me?

Y. DOSHEN.

6 for 25 in Des Moines.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I have been reading your articles on the six-for-25-cents street car tickets; also the answers from the company. I am from Iowa, and they have had this pay-as-you-enter system for some time and it has proven all O K. But even before they had this system they always sold tickets six for 25 cents. You could buy them any place—and the company is still doing business and making money. This city that I speak of is Des Moines, Io., the capital, a good, go-ahead little city.

A. J. BARTLETT,

Principal McDaniels.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Regarding George W. McDaniels, principal of the Madison School, wish to say that I think he ought to be given another trial. During his services as principal of the Madison School he has proved himself a trustworthy principal. He has worked hard to get the school and pupils interested in a line of work different from what they were accustomed to. He has had a reunion of old graduates, something which no other school has ever done. He has succeeded in organizing a ball team and has talked to the boys and urged them on and they have the honor of saying that they won the city pennant. One and all of the pupils like him. He is also respected by every old graduate of the Madison School whom he ever taught. They go to see him regularly and ask his advice upon many subjects, and now, in the midst of all this, is it proper to ask him to resign? Mr. McDaniels has the sympathy of all his pupils, present and past, and I sincerely hope that he will be given another trial.

OLD GRADUATE OF MADISON SCHOOL.

The Empty Dinner-Pail.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

When Napoleon I was asked what makes a good soldier, his reply was, A full stomach. This convincing argument was used with good effect by the Republican party in 1896, 1900 and 1904, in the shape of the full dinner bucket, but this year we have not heard a word about it. Are they forgetting about this efficient vote-getter, or can it be that the working people have become so ungrateful as not to appreciate a good thing any more, or are the Republicans ashamed to use the same old chestnut over and over again, or has it been demoralized by the big stick? Is it empty or, last but not least, have the trusts put the lid on? Can the Post-Dispatch or its many readers explain and oblige a voter?

FRANK M. NORMAN,

Hazing.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

What useful purpose does hazing serve? To avoid confusion of terms, hazing consists in certain cigarette-fed, pin-head dudes (not one of whom, as a rule, is more than one-quarter of half a man, called "sophs," attacking stray freshmen whenever they feel perfectly safe of having sufficiently the advantage of numbers. In these hard times, many families strain their last resources to push a boy through college and to these it is rather discouraging to get the first return for their sacrifice in the shape of a torn suit of clothes. Still, hazing must subserve some useful purpose, since otherwise such famous institutions as the W. U. would not wink at it.

MOTHER.

A Stenographer's Wage.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Shades of Isaac and Ben Pitman! Don't let either shade see this letter. One of the big dry goods houses of St. Louis made it known that its auditor wanted another stenographer. She must be first, a stenographer; second, a good typewriter; third, she must know English well—that is, be well educated. A young lady applied for the position. She was told by the affable head of the department that it was "a nice place" also, that she "must be able to spell well and be good at shorthand.' Then he said the pay would be $3.50 per week. What on earth can a girl do with all that money in a week? The one in question went through the high school, then spent $50 for her shorthand course. She necessarily pays 60 cents a week for carfare and at least 15 cents a day, or 90 cents a week for lunches. Will some mathematically inclined reader please say what she should do with the other $2 she would have left so as to spend it without fear of being accused of the sin of wastefulness and extravagance? Would it be wrong to hoard such a large sum?

SPARK PLUG.

SECOND CHAPTER OF FORAKER'S DEFENSE.

From the Dallas News.

Senator Foraker seems to think it greatly mitigates his offense to show that $50,000 of the money he got from the Standard Oil Co. was loaned to aid him in purchasing a newspaper. To us that is an aggravating rather than a mitigating circumstance. In Texas we have seen the word "loan" put to such use as made it a mere euphemism for wages. But if we accept his explanation, does it not disclose a most intimate relation between him and Standard Oil?

SALOME.

JUST A MINUTE FOR VERSE AND HUMOR

Written for the Post-Dispatch by Clark McAdams.

NOTICE.

Whereas, a regulation bars
All paper venders from the cars
Where pay-on-entering's applied,
And many are dissatisfied;

And whereas, buying papers through
The windows, as you used to do,
Has wholly ceased, as we supposed,
Because the windows have been closed;

Therefore, if you will telephone
Our central office, you'll be shown
True courtesy, and we will tell
You all the news—Kinloch or Bell.

In which I heartily concur.

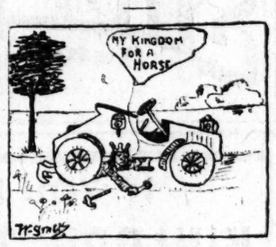

McCULLOCH, Traffic Manager.

BOSTON AND NORTH ADAMS.

Nothing could be more puzzling than the exactly opposite impressions which St. Louis seems to have made upon Boston and North Adams, Mass.

North Adams apparently holds us in the greatest affection; Boston despises us. North Adams wants us to win cups, pennants; Boston wishes us only booby prizes. North Adams has furnished the pilots who will represent St. Louis in the forthcoming balloon race out of Berlin; Boston has furnished the baseball team that has done us out of the American League pennant.

It strikes one that Mr. William Dean Howells slightly erred when he made his famous remark that "the best thing about Boston is the 4:20 train to New York." We like the train to North Adams.

AN EASY CHOICE.

"Who do you think is our best-known public man?"

"Why, I suppose it might be safely said that Mr. Bryan has a speaking acquaintance with practically everybody in the country."

The women of Turkey have been very unhappy, but they finally have the laugh on our Veiled Prophet.

This is the time of year when you find a dime in that old vest.

MR. BEGGS ON NATURAL GAS.

(Scene: Art Hill. Time: Evening. Characters: Mr. Beggs and Citizens.)

MY FRIENDS, there is nothing like personal contact.
I find when I hide out in Milwaukee
We are at loggerheads in St. Louis;
But when I come down here and we talk it over,
Man to man, we understand each other.
Now, about natural gas, my friends:
You think I don't want you to have natural gas—
You think I want to sell you artificial gas.
Wrong, my friends! I do want you to have natural gas. (Cheers.)
If I can't sell you artificial gas,
I'll sell you air or something else.
(Groans.)
But all the same, friends, I am against the natural gas project.
I'll tell you why, I know you'll laugh, but I'm going to tell you,
Even if the press and the people join in one thunderous "Pooh!"
I don't want this natural gas project to succeed
Because I believe in conserving the nation's natural resources. (Laughter.)
That's right, my friends—laugh! I said you would.
I can call the turn on you every time.
Yes, I believe in conserving the nation's resources—
So does President Roosevelt believe in it,
And Gov. Folk, and all the other great men.
Think, friends: What is posterity going to say of us
If we burn all the gas and coal, cut all the timber,
Pipe all the oil, and mine all the ore?
It will call us pigs—that's what it will call us.
It will sit around in the cold and darkness
And cuss us for a lot of prodigals.
Now, friends, we don't want that, do we?
No, we don't. You don't say so,
But I know you don't by your shame-faced look.
Here you are in St. Louis: You have good artificial gas.
It will make a meter go round as fast as anybody's gas.
Why, they come from Europe to fill their balloons with it!
Now, friends, when posterity comes along,
There won't be any natural gas.
There won't be any coal to make it with—
Baer and those fellows will have mined it all,
And what they don't sell in this life
Will be sent on with them to burn in the next.
But if we give posterity a square deal,
There will be natural gas, friends;
All they will have to do is stick a pipe in the ground,
And presto—natural gas at 35 cents!
That is all, friends; we understand each other now.
Thirty-five cent gas is a temptation—
But dollar gas is a duty.
Now, if the big officer over there will hand me down,
I'll catch the 10 o'clock train for Milwaukee.

P. H. C.—Second-hand book stores sometimes keep back numbers of old papers, and bound files can be consulted at Public Library. This office does not keep papers for sale beyond 30 days.

A. C. J.—Piece of horseradish in jar of pickles will keep vinegar from losing strength and pickles will keep much longer. A little powdered alum makes pickles firm. Small thimbleful is sufficient for 100.

J. B.—Union electricians are paid $5.20 a day, 65 cents an hour, work eight hours a day, four hours on Saturday. Double time is allowed for Saturday afternoon and Sunday work. Very few have steady employment.

KOWOTSANAKSKEY. — Cost of changing name in Circuit Court, $4 filing fee. If attorney is employed he charges another fee. You may change your name without action of Court if you do it with an honest purpose.

JAMES.—A cleaner that will polish the worst of soiled brass is made by moistening shellac with alcohol. After polishing with this, rub with a soft, dry cloth. Use but little at a time as the alcohol evaporates. Velvet is good in cleaning brass.

ALMA. — Typewriting—Public stenographer rates: Specifications, first page 15 cents; carbon copies, 5 cents each; legal documents, page, 25 cents; sermons, about 30 cents; lectures, $5 an hour for reporting, 25 cents per page for transcribing; depositions, 15 cents, 15 cents for each carbon copy; correcting manuscript, $5 to $500.

P. S. D.—An officer, to legally arrest a man without a warrant, must see the man commit the offense or be near enough in time and space when the offense is committed to be fully persuaded of the commission by the party arrested, and fully persuaded that there will be danger of his making off unless he be at once arrested. The law writers are not wholly clear on this subject.

C. & C.—Of 157 samples of commercial olive oil examined by the Bureau of Chemistry 72 were under French labels, 18 were California oils and the labels of three did not indicate where they purported to be from. Of the oils under French labels, 11 were adulterated. Of those under Italian labels 10 were adulterated. Of the California oils two were adulterated, and there was reason to believe that both had been tampered with after leaving the manufacturer.

E. P.—Railway whistling: One long blast—We are approaching station, crossing or junction. One short—Put on the brakes; we are going to stop here. Two long—Throw off the brakes. Two short—All right; your signals are understood. Three long—The train has parted. Three short—Look out; the train is going to back. Four long—Hurry aboard, flagmen. Four short—Show your signals, you lubbers, so that we may know what to do. Five short—Let the flagmen go back and protect the rear of the train.

R. E. B.—Blackheads: For two or three weeks, until skin is thoroughly softened, apply a cream or skin food, then force them out by pressure. If moderate pressure fails to bring out, bathe in water as warm as can be borne. Then wring out cloths in hot water and lay over, renewing frequently. Continue this operation 15 or 20 minutes, then anoint with green soap. Rub in well for five or six minutes. Rinse with hot water, using canal's hair brush. Dry and anoint.

FLORA.—Last October Rose L. Fritz of Brooklyn, N. Y., typewrote 8619 words in an hour, with only 31 errors. Allowing for five words deducted as a penalty for each error, her average was 87 words a minute. Miss Fritz won the $1000 cup offered by the trade. In New York Oct. 31, 1908, she wrote 2467 words from dictation in half an hour, making five errors. In the blindfold contest in Chicago in 1904 she wrote 6007 words correctly in 60 minutes. May Carrington of Springfield, Mass., in 1906, wrote, blindfold, 2650 words the first half hour and 2531 the second, a total of 5221 words in one hour, exclusive of errors, for each of which five words were deducted. This gave an average of a little more that 87 words a minute. In 1908 she is said to have attained a speed of 125 words a minute and kept it up for a full hour. In the Patent Office, Washington, Mary Pretty wrote 26,400 words in seven hours. In Chicago, 1908, Charles H. McGurrin of Kalamazoo, Mich., wrote 4627 words in 30 minutes, an average of 154 words a minute. J. F. Cole of Catskill, N. Y., is said to have typewritten in seven continuous hours, 28,900 words—67 and 11-12 words per minute. In a dark room, where he could see nothing but the outline of his machine, with a stopwatch held on him and six witnesses present, John A. Shields of Ottawa, Kan., clattered 223 words on a typewriter in a minute. Mme. Revert of Bordeaux wrote 16,800 words in four hours, her immediate competitor being M. Dubost, who wrote 17,000 words, but as he made nearly twice as many mistakes as Mme. Revert the palm was awarded to her. Shorthand speed: Isaac B. Dement, with a test of carefully prepared matter with the intent of producing as remarkable a record of shorthand writing as possible, wrote 420 words in a minute, counting As and Os as preceding questions and answers. Frederick Ireland, one of the official reporters of Congress, has frequently written 250 words a minute.

Painless Divorce

One of the Widow's Popular Wordalogues, Done for the Post-Dispatch

BY HELEN ROWLAND.

"DOESN'T it make you feel 'shuddery' about marriage," whispered the Widow as she nodded through the taxicab window at the latest divorcee whose pink hat and violet brougham made a bright spot in the Fifth avenue parade, "to see them take divorce so calmly and—and joyously?"

"Oh, I don't know," responded the Bachelor, his eye wandering with artistic interest over the vision in pink.

"Nowadays," declared the Widow severely, following the Bachelor's glance, "divorce is made so easy and attractive that—that"——

"Children cry for it!" finished the Bachelor cheerfully. "But why bother about divorce when you won't even consider marriage?"

"Marrying!" The Widow glanced up scornfully under the brim of her black lace hat. "One doesn't consider growing one's teeth, does one? It's having them out that worries us and brings on nervous prostration."

"Not any longer," declared the Bachelor, "in the face of all the painless methods"——

"What?"

"Painless dentistry," explained the Bachelor patiently, "and painless surgery and—painless divorce. We can have our divorces out as easily and comfortably now as we do our teeth."

"By taking an anaesthetic?" inquired the Widow witheringly. "And a lump of sugar—or an affinity—for consolation?"

"Exactly," agreed the Bachelor enthusiastically. "A little cocaine applied to the tooth—a little common sense applied to divorce—and one can cut off a wife or a husband as one cuts off a finger or a mote without feeling the operation. When two modern people agree to disagree they don't go into hysterics or a rage and rush off leaving a trail of gossip and scandal behind them. They just sit down calmly and"——

"Pack each other's trunks," put in the Widow sarcastically.

"That's it," agreed the Bachelor. "The wife puts in the husband's winter flannels and his cough medicine and his golf sticks"——

"And they divide the bric-a-brac and the money"——

"And the furniture and the children"——

"And one takes the dog and the other the cat"——

"And then they shake hands politely," finished the Bachelor, "wish each other luck and trip off to Europe while the lawyers fight it out."

"You might even give each other written recommendations," suggested the Widow scoffingly.

"Well," snapped the Bachelor, "that would be more reasonable and better form than giving one another a black eye or a bad reputation. I see," he added, glancing maliciously under the Widow's hat brim, "that you have caught the spirit of my argument."

"Spirit!" cried the Widow, pulling her hat down over the cheek nearest the Bachelor. "If you had a particle of spirit you wouldn't suggest breaking a marriage contract as you would a dinner engagement!"

"That's a lot better," declared the Bachelor, "than breaking it as you would a china plate or an egg, and raising a disturbance and mussing things all up, and——what are you doing?" For the Widow had ordered the chauffeur to stop and was alighting in a flutter of temper and ruffles.

"Don't you like the cab?" inquired the Bathelor in an injured tone.

"The atmosphere is too close," declared the Widow, biting her lips, "and I don't like the proximity"——

"What?"

"Nor the way you tried to hold my hand"——

"I didn't."

"Nor your sentiments"——

"Oh!"

"Nor ANYTHING about—about"——

"About ME?" inquired the Bachelor humbly.

"About the conversation," replied the Widow coldly.

"And yet," sighed the Bachelor under his breath as he paid the chauffeur, "it cost me a cent a word!"

RAKING UP FORGET-ME-NOTS

A Conversation With Tess Reported for the Post-Dispatch

BY JOSEPH A. FLYNN.

"I HEARD a strange tale last night," I remarked to Tess this morning at breakfast. "It seems a 19-year-old girl on the next block has just married her fourth husband. Funny, isn't it?"

"There's nothing funny about it," Tess replied, sizing up the general construction of a new coiffure on a fair boarder opposite. "This merry world is made up of all kinds of people. If some of us didn't have phony ideas there'd be no use living. Now, you might think this story you handed out isn't on the level, but it is; because Mrs. Starve-em was first on the job around here with the sad news. The joke of it is, the last John this Henrietta married thinks she's the real thing.

SHE MADE HIM FORK OVER.

"It must be great when she sits down at night and rakes up forget-me-nots I wonder if she calls the others by their first names or by numbers. Just try to dope out for yourself the game No. 4 is up against. If he trots along like a white-haired boy and sticks to the sidewalk he'll be first in war and last in peace; but if he ever wanders away from the Bible path she will be right on the job with a dewy tale of how No. 1 never rolled a coffin nail, No. 2 never varnished the walls with blue language, and No. 3 never wrestled with anything stronger than Adam's ale in his whole life.

"No. 4 will get those gentle reminders morning, noon and night, and so as he won't forget them she'll wake him up about 4 in the morning to tell him a few more. If he fails in luck and cashes in he'll join the others on the wall in a trading stamp frame for No. 5's benefit.

"You know, we women have funny memories. Some can remember the day they were married, what kind of weather was handed out, what they thought they wore, how the church was crowded to the roof with disappointed Johns, and what all the papers said next morning, even if they can't remember just where they left their pocketbook two minutes before.

"Take me for instance. I can remember the first day I shook hands with school, just as if it was yesterday. There I was in a little, white dress, with a bright red sash, and my long, curly, golden hair fell down below my waist; but I lost it two years later when I ran into the measles. All the teachers said I was the prettiest gerry in the school; but that's another story.

"Talking about new meal tickets. When Mrs. Starve-em buried No. 2 last year, as you know, all the cafes in the neighborhood sent bunches of 'We Mourn Our Loss,' for many's the pocketful of tin they separated him from every week. He'd never stay in the middle of the track while he was alive, and he got rats from morning until night.

"Every time he rambled home, overcome by the heat, as he said, Mrs. Starve-em would go right up in the air and tell him what an angel No. 1 was. Half the time I didn't blame poor No. 2 for beating it over the back fence and holding down George's brass rail, for he got an awful deal here.

"Every week the old lady got somebody else's advice on how to get a divorce, but at the same time she made him fork over all the spare cash he had in his pocket. Pneumonia met him last December and he drifted away, and it was only yesterday afternoon I heard Mrs. Starve-em telling a certain party on your floor with suspicious hair that he was such a good thing the electric light in her heart went out when he cashed in.

"Well, he might not have been so bad after all," I said sympathetically, meanwhile endeavoring to penetrate the steak. "You know, we all have our faults."

"Don't get me wrong," she rejoined, gazing long and earnestly at the clock as a lady entered the room, half an hour late. "I'm not putting him on the pan. There are a whole lot around here just as bad, if not worse; and, what's more, he always remembered I owned a mouth and brought me home a swell box of candy every Saturday night."

CHAPTER XIII.

Ars Amoris.

NINE days is the period of time allotted the human mind in which to wonder at anything. In New York the limit is much less; no tragedy can hold the boards as long as that where the bill must be renewed three times a day to hold even the passing attention of those who themselves are eternal understudies in the continuous metropolitan performance. It is very expensive for the newspapers, but fortunately for them there is always plenty of trouble in the five boroughs, and an occasional catastrophe elsewhere to help out.

So they were grateful enough that the Edgewater tragedy lasted them 48 hours, and on the forty-ninth they forgot it.

In society it was about the same. Ruthven was evidently done for; that the spark of mere vitality might linger for years in the exterior shell of him familiar to his world, concerned that world no more. Interest in him was laid aside with the perfunctory finality with which the memory of Alixe was laid away.

As for Selwyn a few people noticed his presence at the services; but even that episode was forgotten before he left the city, six hours later, under an invitation from Washington which admitted of no delay on the score of private business or of personal perplexity. For the summons was peremptory, and his obedience so immediate that a telegram to Austin comprised and concluded the entire ceremony of his leave-taking.

Later he wrote many letters to Eileen Erroll—not one of which he ever sent. But the formality of his silence was no mystery to her; and her response was silence as profound as the stillness in her soul. But deep into her young heart something new had been born, faint fire, latent, unstirred; and her delicate lips rested one on the other in the sensitive curve of suspense; and her white fingers, often now interlinked, seemed tremulously instinct with the exquisite tension hushing body and soul in breathless accord as they waited in unison.

* * * * *

Toward the end of March the special service battleship squadron of the North Atlantic fleet commenced testing Chaosite in the vicinity of the Southern rendezvous. Both main and secondary batteries were employed. Selwyn had been aboard the flagship for nearly a month.

In April the armored ships left the Southern drill ground and began to move northward. A destroyer took Selwyn across to the great fortress inside the Virginia capes and left him there. During his stay there was almost constant firing; later he continued northward as far as Washington, but it was not until June that he telegraphed Austin:

"Government satisfied. Appropriation certain next session. Am on my way to New York."

"Dear," Nina said to Eileen, the tears of uxorial vexation drying unshed in her pretty eyes, "Austin has thought fit to seize upon this moment to bring a man down to dinner. So if you are dressed would you kindly see that the tables are rearranged, and then telephone somebody to fill in—two girls, you know. The oldest Craig girl might do for one. Beg her mother to let her come."

Eileen was being laced, but she walked to the door of Nina's room, followed by her little Alsatian maid, who deftly continued her offices en route.

"Whom is Austin bringing?" she asked.

"He didn't say. Can't you think of a second girl to get? Isn't it vexing! Of course there's nobody left—nobody ever fills in the country. Do you know, I'll be driven into letting Drina sit up with us!—for sheer lack of material. I suppose the litt'e imp will have a fit if I suggest it, and probably perish of indigestion tomorrow."

"Phil," exclaimed Nina. "O, Austin—and you never told us"——

Austin, ruddy and bland, came up to make his excuses; a little whirlwind of excitement passed like a brisk breeze over the clustered tables as Selwyn followed; and a dozen impulsive bare arms were outstretched to greet him as he passed, returning the bright, eager salutations on every hand.

"Are you remaining to smoke?" asked Eileen as Selwyn took her to the doorway. "Because, if you are not—I'll wait for you."

"Where?" he asked.

"Anywhere. * * * Where shall I?"

Again the twin blue miracles were lifted to his; and deep in them he saw her young soul, waiting.

"Find me when you can get away," said Eileen, looking once more at Selwyn; "Nina is signaling me now."

Again, as of old, her outstretched hand—the little formality symbolizing to him the importance of all that concerned them. He touched it.

"A bientot," she said.

"On the lawn out there—farther out, in the starlight," he whispered—his voice broke—"my darling"——

The long windows were open to the veranda; Selwyn, with his arm through Gerald's, walked to the railing and looked out across the fragrant starlit waste. And very far away they heard the sea intoning the hymn of the four winds.

Then the elder man withdrew his arm and stood apart for a while. A little later he descended to the lawn, crossed it and walked straight out into the waste.

The song of the sea was rising now. In the strange little forest below, deep among the trees, elfin lights broke out across the unseen Brier water, then vanished.

He halted to listen; he looked long and steadily into the darkness around him. Suddenly he saw her—a pale blur in the dusk.

"Eileen?"

"Is it you, Philip?"

She stood waiting as he came up through the purple gloom of the moorland, the stars' brilliancy silvering her—waiting—yielding in pallid silence to his arms, crushed in them, looking into his eyes, dumb, wordless.

Then slowly the pale sacrament changed as the wildrose tint crept into her face; her arms clung to his shoulders, higher, tightened around his neck. And from her lips she gave into his keeping soul and body, guiltless a God gave it, to have and to hold beyond such incidents as death and the eternity that no man clings to save in the arms of such as she.

THE END.

Man Marries the Fifth Girl

This Is Statistical Truth, Says

HELEN OLDFIELD.

SO far as is publicly known, no statistics have yet been compiled upon the subject, but observation and evidence go to prove that the average man marries somewhere about the fifth or sixth girl with whom he falls in love. There have been four or five young women, each of whom, for a longer or shorter period, he has regarded as the paragon of her sex; but he has already gotten over his infatuation and has married another, and probably congratulates himself upon the fact that he has done so—it would be most unfortunate for himself and for his wife if he did not. Also it probably is equally a good thing for the four or five girls whom he did not marry.

The manner of a girl's refusal should weigh heavily in the reception thereof. Any man with his fair share of common sense ought to know whether he is snubbed or the contrary; whether his suit is peremptorily declined or merely tentatively set aside; whether the negative is positive, or no more than the half affirmative of the old grammar rule.

Another thing which the wooer should take into consideration is that women from their youth up are taught to repress their feelings and often are stiff and cold because of the effort at repression. Almost all women are more or less nervous, and mirth, which is hysterical, rather than merry, often is resented as ridicule by a sensative wooer. An attack of the kind may dash the cup of happiness from a woman's lipes and incense her suitor past forgiveness. An involuntary smile will be taken for heartlessness by the man who is desperately in earnest. A humorous word will be an insult, a jest a proof of scorn. No man can bear to be laughed at, and his vanity, if not his heart, will receive a wound which not easily is to be healed. It is a pity, but women sometimes lose the men they love by a lack of self-control, which is misconstrued into ridicule.

According to the novels to the day, the infinite form of proposal appears to be in favor at present. It cannot too strongly be insisted upon that this is unfair to both, more especially to the woman. If the man is in earnest—and no man who is not so ought to propose marriage—he clearly should make the woman understand that he is asking her to be his wife. She cannot well urge him to be explicit, and while a well-bred woman might thus lose her lover, an unscrupulous one might annex a man who had no intention of asking her to marry him. Such things have happened. It is easier to form an engagement of marriage than—for the man, at least—to break it.—Chicago Tribune.

Resinol Soap

Offers you new possibilities of cleanliness. Looking at the soap-question broadly, after trying all kinds, you'll be inclined to believe—as thousands do—that there is really only one other kind, and that its name is "just soap." The "just soap" kind can't begin to do the good things for your Skin that RESINOL SOAP does—for it's the "RESINOL" and the pure vegetable oils that really produce the splendid results. There is only one RESINOL SOAP, but if you use it once and see how extra clean it gets you and how wonderfully refreshing it is, you're hardly likely to ever go back to the other kind. Remember the only Soap that is medicated with RESINOL is RESINOL SOAP

STORIES FROM EVERBODY'S

EVERY employe of the Bank of England is required to sign his name in a book on his arrival in the morning, and, if late, must give the reason therefor. The chief cause of tardiness is usually fog, and the first man to arrive writes "fog" opposite his name, and those who follow write "ditto." The other day, however, the first late man gave as the reason, "wife had twins," and 20 other late men mechanically signed "ditto" underneath.

Chiefly Legal Advice.

A certain prominent lawyer of Toronto is in the habit of lecturing his office staff from the junior partner down, and Tommy, the office boy, comes in for his full share of the admonition. That his words were appreciated was made evident the other day by a conversation between Tommy and another office boy on the same floor which he recently overheard.

"Wotcher wages?" asked the other boy.

"Ten thousand a year," replied Tommy.

"Aw, g'wan!"

"Sure," insisted Tommy, unabashed. "Four dollars a week in cash, an' de rest in legal advice."

Her Version of It.

The English spoken by the "Pennsylvania Dutch," as the inhabitants of certain districts in the Eastern part of the State are popularly known, affords some rare specimens of expression. A man who was passing a small house on the outskirts of "Sous Besselem"—that is the nearest possible spelling of the local prounuciation—heard the daughter of the family calling her brother in to supper. "George," she said, "you come right in, now; pa's on the table, and ma's half et!"

Both Looking for Him.

The stranger advanced toward the door. Mrs. O'Toole stood in the doorway with a rough stick in her left hand and a frown on her brow.

"Good morning," said the stranger politely. "I'm looking for Mr. O'Toole."

"So'm I," said Mrs. O'Toole, shifting her club over to her other hand.

No Wonder.

They were discussing the relative position of various countries as musical centers. Germany seemed to have the most votaries, much to the evident displeasure of one excitable Italian, who wished his own country to carry off the palm. "Italy is turning out the most musicians, and has always turned out the most," he cried. "Ach, Gott!" exclaimed a German present, "can you blame her?"

Reassuring.

Once Sir Henry Irving, while playing "Macbeth" in London, was somewhat disconcerted by one of the "gallery gods." He had reached the point where Macbeth orders Banquo's ghost to leave the banquet board. "Hence, horrible shadow, unreal mockery, hence!" exclaimed Irving in his most tragic tones, and with a convulsive shudder sank to the ground, drawing his robe about his face. Just as Banquo withdrew, an agitated cockney voice from high up in the gallery piped out as if to reassure Irving: "It's all right now, 'Enery; 'e's gone!"

His Wish Fulfilled.

A German peddler rapped timidly at the kitchen entrance. Mrs. Kelly, angry at being interrupted in her washing, flung open the door and glowered at him.

"Did yez wish to see me?' she demanded in threatening tones.

The peddler backed off a few steps.

"Vell, if I did," he assured her with an apologetic grin, "I got my vish; thank you."

An Ambitious Mother.

"Hubby," said the observant wife, "the janitor of these flats is a bachelor."

"What of it?"

"I really think he is becoming interested in our oldest daughter."

"There you go again with your pipe dreams! Last week it was a duke."

Crazy With the Heat.

"Can you tell me what steam is?" asked the examiner.

"Why, sure sir," replied Patrick confidently. "Steam is—why—er—it's wather tot's gone crazy wid the heat."

By JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

ONLY three days ago it was the opinion of nearly all the baseball fans and critics that the St. Louis Browns would beat out Detroit in the American League race. But in those three days the cards have been shuffled and Detroit has drawn four victories, while the Browns drew two defeats and a rainy day. The result is that the Tigers are back in first place, while the Brwnos are a bad fourth.

Just as though the Browns had not been playing in tough enough luck, the weather man cut into their prospects, further, yesterday by causing a postponement of the game with New York, a game that the Browns felt sure of winning, and by so doing adding a spark to their flickering championship hopes. Now the local team will have to play two double-headers in two days against the Highlanders, and the chances of winning all four games are indeed gloomy. At the same time, it seems that one more defeat will blow out their light.

Hughey Jennings must be given credit for all-inspiring power to pull his team, together after it had apparently quit cold in the race. It was down in third place three days ago, but today is glimmering at the top again, and with the schedule from now to the end a bit in its favor, it seems that Detroit should stick at the top.

Washington Weary.

Four games are to be played by the Tigers and Washington, if the weather will permit. Washington is undoubtedly fagged out from its strenuous series against Cleveland, and it will be lucky to win a single game from Detroit. What's more, the Washington players don't care if Detroit takes four straight, because Joe Cantillon and his men came West this time with but one purpose in mind, and that was to put Cleveland out of the race. They took two of the three games played over there, and for that reason the Naps are behind the Tigers today.

The barring of Jim Delehanty, Washington's second baseman and heavy hitter, from the Cleveland grounds had so riled the Washington manager and players that they exerted themselves to the limit to win that series against the Naps and put them out of the race. Now they will undoubtedly relax, for there are many of the players who wish Detroit would win and they will not overexert themselves to win a single game over there.

While Detroit is playing four games against Washington, Cleveland will be playing three games against Philadelphia and Chicago will be playing two games against Boston. Under such conditions it is quite likely that Detroit will be further in the lead Wednesday night than it is today.

Browns May Settle Race.

It is after Wednesday that the real fight for the pennant will begin. Detroit then has to play the Browns two games and the White Sox three. Under those conditions it may be well for Hughey Jennings and his men, if they have a lead of a couple of games when they are through with Washington, for they will undoubtedly be given the battle of their lives against the two strong Western clubs.

Cleveland has two games with Chicago and three with the Browns after finishing the series with Philadelphia on Wednesday. Undoubtedly Manager Lajoie cannot look forward to those five games with any degree of comfort.

In the meantime the White Sox are sticking silently on the heels of the leaders and playing great baseball. If the Tigers or Cleveland wabble for an instant, those Sox will go shooting to the front sure. For such a tough and strenuous finish, the White Sox are the best. It isn't that they have better players, but that they have more brains and more nerve.

All the Browns can do is try to win every game from now to the end, and then figure up the standing and see if they have won the pennant. Should they take four straight from New York and the other three teams take one beating each in that time, then the Browns could, by desperate fighting, win the pennant, for they will have a chance at all three of the leaders.

Crusinberry's Comment on the Game

There are but eight points between New York and Pittsburg in the National League, the Giants being first with .634, Chicago second with .633 and Pittsburg third with .626. In the American League, only four points separate the first three teams, Detroit standing at .576, Cleveland at .575 and Chicago at .572.

It is now quite certain that neither pennant will be decided until the last day or two of the season. In the meantime the National Baseball Commission, the ruling body that is to conduct the world's series, is tied hand and foot and can make but few preparations for the big games that are to decide the championship of the world. If the winners should not be decided until the last day, the Commission will have to hustle as it never did before to make all arrangements and start the games within a couple of days after the close.

Last season, it was easily seen by September 1 that the Cubs would win the National League pennant, and even with the close race in the American League, the Tigers had the flag won three or four days before the closing date. There are a lot of little things to attend to in the way of getting tickets printed, planning on transportation, etc., besides deciding on the place of the first game and holding a meeting of the two clubs on the day preceeding the series.

The Giants have eight games to play in the next six days, all of them against Philadelphia. Four will be played in each city. After that, they meet Boston for three games on the Polo Grounds to close the season.

The Cubs have but six games to play from now to the close, five of them being with Cincinnati and one with Pittsburg. The Pittsburg game is to be played in Chicago next Sunday.

Pittsburg will play six games against the Cardinals this week, four being in Pittsburg, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and the other two in St. Louis on Friday and Saturday. After the Sunday game in Chicago, the Pirates will be through.

Detroit will play Washington four games thi week and two games with St. Louis, after which they go to Chicago for three games to wind up the season. Cleveland will play Philadelphia three games and Chicago two games at Cleveland this week, and then come to St. Louis next Sunday for the three closing games of the season. Wednesday and Thursday of this week are both open dates in the West for the American League and the Browns may go to Chicago to play off a postponed game on one of those days. It is up to Managers Jones and McAleer to decide whether they care to play off the game and it has not been decided yet. If the Sox should get to the front in the next two days, they will hardly care to play the game. McAleer is quite willing to play it. Undoubtedly it would draw a big crowd in the Windy City.

THAT Coach Edward Cochems has splendid material at hand from which to develop a winning football team this season is amply illustrated in the above picture. This shows six men who will be new to the St. Louis regular team this year, if they make it at all. So far only one of the number seems certain of a regular position, Hawkins, although Sullivan is all but a certainty.

Yet, notwithstanding these are merely possibilities, all are remarkably well-built players. Each man is 6 feet 1 inch tall and each weighs 188 pounds, or within a small fraction of it. All have had football experience and several had starred on other elevens.

Cochems has several players on his team who outclass these men in physical development and some in football experience. So that the foxy gentleman from Grand avenue is not going to be caught without available playing material, even though graduation did sweep his team of all its veterans save three.

CARDINALS TIED FOR LAST PLACE

Today's Game Is Postponed to Permit Team to Attend Funeral of Owner Robison.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 28.—By splitting even in a double header with the Reds yesterday the St. Louis Cardinals went into a tie with Brooklyn for seventh place in the National League and now the boys have hopes of escaping the cellar position in the end, though they have six games to play against the strong Pittsburg club.

The St. Louis boys showed up well in the first game of the double-header because they broke loose after the Reds had taken a lead of four runs and by some of the best hitting of the year McCloskey's boys banged in a victory by a score of 7 to 4. In the second game they gave a poor exhibition of fielding and hitting, and darkness ended the game after five innings with the score 6 to 1 in favor of Cincinnati.

Young "Dusty" Rhodes did the pitching for the Cardinals in the first game and it was due to his excellent work that the team was able to win, although the St. Louis boys hit the ball hard against Pitchers Rowan and Spade.

Raymond Poorly Supported.

In the second game "Bugs" Raymond pitched for the Cardinals and O'Toole did the heaving for the Reds. "Bugs" was given miserable support, and though but six hits were made off him, he allowed three of them to be bunched in one inning and the game went flying to Cincinnati.

In the fourth inning of the first game Hans Lobert, the hustling shortstop of the Reds, accomplished the feat of stealing second, third and home.

The Cardinals were scheduled to play against the Pirates at Pittsburg today, but the game has been postponed because of the funeral of Frank De Hass Robison, one of the owners of the St. Louis club. The boys went to Cleveland to attend the funeral, and after it is over they will leave for Pittsburg.

KRAMER BEATS CLARKE, THE AUSTRALIAN, IN CYCLE RACE

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—America triumphed over Australia yesterday afternoon at the Vailsburg cycle track in Newark, when Frank L. Kramer of East Orange, N. J., defeated A. J. Clarke of Melbourne in two straight heats in their match race before 7000 spectators. The Australian defeated Kramer the night before in Madison Square Garden in a match in which Mayer, the German champion, was also a contestant. In yesterday's series Clarke was no match for the American champion, who outgeneraled and outsprinted his opponent in each of the two heats. Kramer won each heat by about four feet.

Three-Cushion Tourney to Start.

Zell (30) and Albright (24) will meet in the opening match of a handicap three-cushion billiard tournament at the Rex Billiard Hall this evening. Zell is one of the scratch men of the tournament. He will be allowing Albright a 6-point handicap this evening.

Dorando, Olympic Hero, Will Race in New York

Italian Marathon Star May Meet Winner of British Event, Hayes, and Longboat.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.

A DISPATCH from London says that Dorando, who collapsed so sensationally in the great Marathon race there, is coming to America to run against Hayes and Longboat in Madison Square Garden, the race to be of the Marathon distance—26¼ miles.

Dorando, like Hayes, the American winner, turned professional after the great event, going on the vaudeville stage. Hayes is now showing in New York. Probably Dorando has exhausted the English vaudeville field and is anxious for a nip or two in Hayes' pastures.

But that's a great idea to have Dorando and Hayes and Longboat (the latter is running very well just now) fight it out all over again, professionally. It would make a race to pack the Garden to the roof. Hayes has not yet given out whether or not he would run. He won the highest athletic honor the world has to give, and probably will be content to rest on that and never race again.

As for Longboat, he is still an amateur and so far has shown no desire to become a professional. The promoters of the race would find it hard to drag the great Indian from his amateur standing.

Jenkins Comes to Life.

Tom Jenkins, once wrestling champion, beat Frank Gotch easily here two or three years ago. Since that match he lost to Gotch in the West. Jenkins is out with another challenge now. He wants to wrestle the big Bulgarian, Yuseff Mahmout, who was brought over to wrestle Gotch. Jenkins says he'll make a show of the newcomer and then hand Gotch a surprise package just to prove that the Osler theory is a dead one.

Murphy to Meet Baldwin.

There's a good scrap on the lists for Tuesday night. It comes off in Boston—12 rounds between Tommy Murphy and Matty Baldwin. These boys can scrap. They prefer fighting to pie.

Baldwin won a decision over Murphy in Boston once and it is that decision Murphy wants to wipe off the slate.

Tommy is the best of the Eastern lightweights. If he can beat Baldwin (who is as tough for his weight as they come) Tommy can put up as loud a claim for a try at Nelson or McFarland as any of them.

DE ORO TO BEGIN MATCH TONIGHT

Champion Pool Player Is to Start Games Against Benny Allen in Kansas City.

Alfredo De Oro, world's champion pool player, who has resided in St. Louis for the past five years, will be called upon to defend his title against Benny Allen of Kansas City, in games which will open in Kansas City this evening and finish in this city Friday and Saturday nights. Allen is only 19 years of age. He is a nephew of Johnny Kling, the catcher of the Chicago Cubs baseball team, who is also considered a first-class pool player.

In the world's championship tournament held at Chicago this spring, Allen defeated Thomas Hueston, at that time the holder of the championship emblem and also De Oro in championship games. De Oro won his title by defeating Frank Sherman, winner of the tournament.

The match between De Oro and Allen calls for the men to play 200 points in Kansas City tonight and tomorrow night and the same number at the Royal Billiard Hall in this city on Friday and Saturday nights. The winner of the match will gain possession of the world's championship emblem held by De Oro, the entire gate receipts and a $150 side wager.

AUTOISTS TO START BIG 24-HOUR RACE ON FRIDAY NIGHT

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Arrangements have been completed for the 24-hour automobile race, which will begin at the Brighton Beach racetrack next Friday night. Fourteen cars have already been entered, and it is expected that before the day of the race at least thre more will be added to the list.

The best drivers in the country will compete. Practically all of the drivers who handled the cars in the last race will take part. Harry Cobe and his partner, Ralph Mulford, who drove the Lozier car to victory in the last race, will have charge of the same car. Both have demonstrated their ability, and fearlessness, and they are confident that they will beat the record they made two weeks ago.

Harry Michenor will drive the car in which he finished second in the last race, and he believes that he will do even better this time.

POVERTY PURSE FOR TURF STARS

Stake Horses Will Be Asked to Run for a Mere Pittance at Aqueduct.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—This is the day of the racehorse owners' discontent and financial loss. At the Aqueduct track today a six-day race meeting will begin, with poverty purses of $300—a sum so low that, after the jockey fees, the trainers' perquisites and the entrance money to the sweepstakes are paid, the owner will receive scarcely enough money to pay for a good supper for four at a first-class hotel.

The drop in the value of added money in some races to $300 marks a new era in local turf affairs. It tells plainer than words that the racing magnates, the men who have waxed wealthy on the sport, rivaling that paid out to stockholders of the Standard Oil Co., are not willing to pay out of their pockets any of the dollars they have made in order to keep racing on a high plane until the end of the season.

Racing men declare that there is not the slightest need of this cut in the value of the races. At the Aqueduct, Jamaica and Belmont Park tracks, big sums were made by the promoters during these early meetings. Each club could race its full program out to the letter without the loss of a single dollar on the season's business. But no club has signified its intention of doing this.

SOCCER TEAMS EAGER FOR PLAY

New League Has Been Organized and Season's Plans Are Under Way.

The St. Louis Soccer League has been organized and will open the season with a double-header at Kulage Park on the first Sunday in November. The games will be played each Sunday, weather permitting, until the first Sunday in March.

The St. Malachys, Shamrocks and the Kinlochs clubs were admitted to the league and the fourth club will be chosen at a meeting to be held at Thomas Cahill's residence, 4229 North Newstead avenue, next Wednesday evening.

The Blue Bells of Beckemeyer, Ill., put in a strong bid for membership in the league. Several other clubs are also after the fourth place in the league. The Blue Bells are said to be strong and will in all probability be admitted. An effort will be made to organize an association for the purpose of controling soccer football in St. Louis. The new league, C. B. C. and President Murray of the Athletic Park League are said to be in favor of such an organization.

Officers for the new league were elected as follows:

Winto E. Barker, president; Dr. L. T. Pepperling, vice-president; P. R. Gunn, treasurer; Thomas W. Cahill, secretary.

American Tennis Team Expects to Circle the Globe on Tour

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—America's international lawn tennis team, Frederick B. Alexander and Beals C. Wright, will leave Friday for Australia. Neither the national champion in singles, William A. Larned, or Harold H. Hackett, a title holder in doubles, will accompany the teams, although both were nominated and competed in the recent American-British ties against Maj. J. G. Ritchie and James G. Parke.

To many of the followers of the game the fact that Alexander and Wright set out on their long journey on a Friday, is indicative of what success is expected of them in their quest of the Davis international challenge cup.

Whatever the result of the international cup matches may be, the American team is destined to circle the globe and play on the courts of China, and possibly Japan and India. It was in the Monte Carlo championships two years ago that Alexander defeated R. F. Doherty.

Alexander has always done well in that quarter of the world, while Wright played poorly there. They will not visit the South American tournaments, to which the Dohertys are going. had an open injunction suit. At that

WITH only one game of football played this season by each of the important local football factors, Washington University and St. Louis University, the inevitable shredding apart and microscopic investigation into the vitals of these elevens seems already to have begun. As a matter of fact both games played showed little that was not already known before.

The known quantities did not need investigation, while the test of the new material was insufficient to matter much. In a general way the games showed what was understood before—that St. Louis University is opulent in physical wealth, whereas Coach Cayou of Washington will have to trim mightily to present an obstinate front to Vanderbilt and Missouri.

Both coaches sent out the usual discouraging notices from the camps last night—notices which may be set aside without comment, for, like the games played, they are too early in the season to be worth attention. As a matter of fact, Cochems' squad is not an unknown quantity in any sense. The football material is all there, assembled during the past two seasons, with the addition of half a dozen good men who matriculated this year.

Team a Known Quantity.

There is not a man on the St. Louis University squad who has not already been classified by Coach Cochems; and the latter could today pick the eleven which will face Carlisle, barring injuries, with the possible exception of one of two positions for which the talent seems equally meritorious.

There is little question about the St. Louis University team this year. There is really only one position which seems dubious, even to those who are not actively connected with the management of the club, but who have followed the fortunes of the organization. That is the position of left halfback. Devlin is good, but he lacks the necessary weight. At that he will run close to 170 pounds. In other respects he is a clever, thoughtful, fast back, much on the Acker style. He is one of the best defensive men on the squad, and this may win a permanent place in the back field. Competition is not strong for this position, and it is the one tender point in the armor of Achilles Cochems.

The line can be dismissed with the general statement that it will surpass that of last year in efficiency. There are two capable men for almost every position and the addition of big Lindsay will make it the most formidable line that ever played for St. Louis on the attack. Probably every man on the team will have a hand at carrying the ball save the center. Lamb, last year, besides being one of the best defensive men in the West, was a catapult on attack and trampled his way through opposing lines for big gains throughout the year. Lindsay will be equally good, if not better. He weighs 230 pounds and is positively lean. He has the speed to make him a terror and if he does not break up many a game this year it will be because the opposition will mark him for especial attention.

The ends will relieve the backs in carrying the ball and Eddie Murphy will also help out. Thus the opportunities for a varied attack are endless.

Just Where St. L. U. Stands.

THIS football year means much to St. Louis. It means much to those followers of the St. Louis eleven who have believed that the team Cochems has built up could do something against an Eastern team of quality. Carlisle and Western U. P., which had an excellent eleven last season, will be two of the Eastern visitors and if Cochems can leave his mark on this pair, the carpers will have to admit merit.

Only a few of the conservative Eastern college men have ever given credit to St. Louis for being a first-class team. When, after Cochems had gone through his first year with the eleven without a stain, and wiped Iowa all over Sportsman's Park for a 31-0 victory, the explanation made by the dubious was that Iowa was weak. But it was a stronger eleven than had beaten the same St. Louis men the previous year 24-0. Chicago, too, but two weeks before, with one of its best elevens, had beaten Iowa only 34—0, thus bringing Stagg's team to a par with St. Louis. But local critics could still not see the Cochems machine, not even when Lieut. Hackett, who refereed the Yale-Princeton and other big games of that year, and who officiated here, said that Cochems' attack was without a parallel in all the games he had seen that year.

This year the line of comparison will go straight home to the "big five," to the "big three," even, for the Indians play Harvard. The difference between the Indians' forward pass and the "projectile pass" employed by Cochems will then be tested. It will also be shown whether the West is so dreadfully far behind in football, as far as St. Louis is concerned, as our graduate collegians from the East would lead us to believe.

We Are Real Sports.

AMERICANS who shuddered, shocked at the unspeakable atrocity committed against good sportsmanship by the English officials at the Olympic games, might be asked whether they put the seal of approval upon the sporting spirit which the Americans displayed in the recent international tennis clash with the British team which took place in the East shortly.

The match was to decide whether England or America should have the honor of going to Australia to compete for the Davis Trophy now held by Wilding and Brookes of Melbourne. In the preliminary our national champion, William A. Larned, unquestionably the strongest player in the United States, participated with three other of our best stars. The preliminary was decided in four points, and of these Larned won two, Beals Wright one, while the doubles pair, by winning their match for America, earned the right of the United States to represent this country in the challenge round.

Now it develops that Larned is not going to Australia to compete and that he never had any idea of going, but merely entered to help bring the challenge privilege to America.

This is truly great. If ever there was a case of unsportsmanlike conduct this is one. It is deliberately robbing England, for it is by no means certain that the two men who will represent America will be anything like as strong as the four originally scheduled, or even as the two men the English team was composed of. England might just as well have sent over the invincible Dougherty brothers, who have cleaned up the Americans time and again, won the challenge right, and then sent over to Australia the two substitutes on the team.

Ising and Dittmer Draw.

Len Ising and Walter Dittmer, two heavyweight wrestlers, after wrestling for one hour and fifteen minutes at the South Broadway A. C. yesterday without either man gaining a fall, started roughing each other, and as both were weak the match was called a draw by the referee. In the preliminary Nealon won from Smith in 18 minutes.

S.S.S. NATURE'S PERFECT TONIC

There is scarcely any one, no matter how vigorous and healthy, who does not need a tonic sometimes. Little physical irregularities upset the system, the appetite fails, digestion is poor, the body feels tired and worn out, and other unpleasant symptoms give warning that the system is disordered and needs assistance to ward off, perhaps, some serious sickness or ailment. S. S. S. is recognized everywhere as the best of all tonics, nature's medicine, made entirely of healing, cleansing, invigorating roots and herbs, a systemic remedy without an equal. S. S. S. has the additional value of being the greatest of all blood purifiers. It re-establishes the healthy circulation of the blood, rids the body of that tired, worn-out feeling, improves the appetite and digestion, and brings about a return of health to those whose systems have been weakened or depleted. S. S. S. acts more promptly and pleasantly than any other medicine, and those who are run down in health should commence its use at once. It will thoroughly purify the blood and tone up the system. S. S. S. is admirably suited for a systemic remedy because it is free from minerals; it may be used without harmful results by persons of any age, and no unpleasant effects ever follow. THE POST-DISPATCH'S DAILY RECORD OF MARKETS AND FINANCE

SECURITIES SAG IN FINAL HOUR ON WALL STREET

General Market Closes Lower in Rather Irregular Session.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—10 a. m.—Prices on the Stock Exchange opened barely changed from Saturday's final quotations, with a number of prominent issues at parity. Among the latter were Amalgamated Copper, Atchison, St. Paul and Great Northern.

The divergence from the close only reached as much as ⅜ in any instance.

In the industrial division Anaconda, Lead and Steel preferred were a small fraction off, while Smelting, Consolidated Gas and Steel common advanced by about the same amount. Similar irregularity was in evidence among the rail stocks, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, New York Central, Pennsylvania and Rock Island preferred being about ¼ higher each.

On the other hand, Northern Pacific, Reading, Southern and Union Pacific were lower, the latter being the weakest stock on the list in the initial trading.

At the end of the first half hour's trading most of the prominent issues had scored small gains. Great Northern was practically the only one that declined, losing ⅜ point.

Rock Island preferred and Northern Pacific gained ¼ each, Southern Pacific ⅜, Union Pacific and Reading ½ each, and St. Paul ¾.

The Copper stocks, Steel common and Lead were active. Amalgamated and Smelting lost a small fraction each, Steel was unchanged and Lead advanced ½. Consolidated Gas was very active and advanced nearly 2 points.

Americans in London were firm and from ⅛ to ½ higher.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28, 12:30 p. m.—There was little doing in the way of trading during the forenoon hours. The market was slightly irregular, although the general tendency of prices was upward.

Among the industrials Anaconda and Amalgamated declined ¼ each, lead ½ and Smelting 1 point. Car and Foundry common advanced ¾, the steels ¼ each and Consolidated Gas 1 point. Among the rails Atchison, B. R. T., N. Y. Central and Pennsylvania were unchanged.

B. & O. receded ¼ and Rock Island preferred ⅛. The Harriman and Hill issues showed considerable strength, Southern Pacific advancing 1 point, Union Pacific 1⅝, Great Northern ⅝ and Northern Pacific 1¼. Missouri Pacific gained ⅛, St. Paul 1⅝ and Reading and Canadian Pacific 1¼ each.

Totals sales to noon were only 248,000 shares.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Semi-official statements regarding the decrease in the idle equipment of the railroads of the country given out in the last few days were much less than is shown by the official report of the Committee on Car Efficiency of the American Railway Association. The falling off in the number of surplus cars in the last two weeks was larger than in any of the preceding similar periods since the movement turned from accumulation to reduction. The report, as of Sept. 16, shows that, as compared with Sept. 2, there was a decrease of 27,300 in box, 766 in flat, 18,312 in coal and 4184 in other kinds of cars or an aggregate decrease in the two weeks of 50,562. The maximum of surplus cars was 413,338, reached on April 29, so that, as compared with that date, the returns as of Sept. 16 show a falling off of 242,686.

FINANCIAL ITEMS

Bank exchanges this week at all the leading cities in the United States are $2,457,028,675, 10.5 per cent larger than last year, but 7.2 per cent under the corresponding week of 1906. Comparisons with a year ago are not now entirely satisfactory, as payments through the banks at that time were reduced by the disturbance in the various markets. The increase this year is almost entirely at New York City, and is due in a large measure to the greater activity in the stock market. There is also an increase at Minneapolis and Kansas City, which reflects the large grain movement this year and the activity in flour. There is still a large loss at Pittsburg, Cleveland and some other cities, but the loss at Chicago and St. Louis is small. Average daily bank exchanges for the year to date are compared below for three years:

	1908.	1907.	1906.

July	358,678,000	428,590,000	425,723,000

DOWNWARD RANGE IN WHEAT PRICES

Rapidly Increasing Supplies, Chief Item of Generally Bearish News, Causes Easiness.

While there is still considerable bullish sentiment in wheat which prompts traders to buy moderate quantities on the soft spots, thereby keeping the market in a relatively steady position, outside speculation is almost at a standstill and conditions in the pit quite dull. Prices showed a sagging tendency Monday, though not at all fully responding to the very bearish news, and the tone during most of the session was easy. The close was ⅝@¾c down for the day.

A lower range set in at the opening, selling being caused by the ¼d to ½d lower cables and the copious rains throughout the Southwest. Moisture has become plentiful throughout the belt and there can be no further reasonable complaints of insufficient soakings to plow, which is promising, as there is yet time to secure a large acreage of winter wheat. Statistical news was very bearish, the world's shipments being over 500,000 bu larger than those of the same day last year, while wheat and flour on ocean passage increased 2,456,000 bu.

The very large movement of spring wheat continues, Minneapolis and Duluth receiving a total of over 2000 cars, while receipts at Winnipeg were more than 800 cars. Reports state that a continuation of the large arrivals is indicated, and although the cash demand is still quite strong, stocks in all positions are increasing rapidly. Supplies are of course considerably below last year's, but they are rapidly piling up and in the event of no let-up in the movement, are likely before very long to prove burdensome.

During the early periods of trading, however, prices made a surprisingly firm stand in the face of these very bearish factors. Opening easier, prices, under commission house buying, worked up to the previous day's closing levels, and again sagged, being affected by the weakness of corn. The recessions, however, were only fractional and the trading thereat was very light. The early range of prices was narrow.

Sept. wheat opened ¼c lower at $1.02 and was offered down to $1.01¾. Dec. wheat opened ¼c lower at $1.01½, sagged to $1.01⅜@1.01¼, advanced to $1.01⅝@1.01¾, sagged to $1.01⅜, advanced to $1.01⅞ and sold down to $1.01¼@1.01⅜. May wheat opened ⅛c lower at $1.04¼, declined to $1.04@1.04⅛, recovered to $1.04¼ and was offered down to $1.03⅞.

Dec. corn sold ⅛@¼c lower at 63c and May corn declined ⅛@⅜c to 63½c.

May oats sold ¼c lower at 50⅜c.

World's shipments of wheat were 11,120,000 bu against 10,104,000 bu last week and 10,640,000 bu a year ago. Wheat and flour on ocean passage now amount to 30,768,000 bu.

The cash demand at Minneapolis in spite of the enormous receipts held up well, No. 1 northern wheat selling mainly around 1⅜c over December option. Minneapolis stocks increased 850,000 bu for two days. Minneapolis cars were 991 against 276 last year, Duluth 989 against 259 last year and Winnipeg 819 against 376 last year.

The visible supply of wheat increased 5,229,000 bu and now amounts to 29,924,000 bu, compared with a decrease of 259,000 bu with 43,750,000 bu in sight at the same time last year.

The late trading was dull with prices still rather sluggish. Reports of fair export sales and the very large seaboard clearances, the bulk of which were from Galveston, caused a feeble rally, but were offset by the enormous increase in the visible. With the latter factor as the chief depression prices were further lowered and closed practically at the day's low point.

September wheat closed at $1.01¼. December declined to $1.01 and closed at $1.01⅛, and May was offered down to $1.03⅝@¾, closing at $1.03⅞ bid.

Primary receipts of wheat were 2,512,625 bu with shipments of 888,915 bu and local receipts were 172,159 bu, with shipments of 26,730 bu.

Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour including Galveston were late reported to be 1,900,000 bu.

There was not much of a trade in corn and the tone was easy. The heavy rains throughout all portions of the belt are beneficial to the crop and improved prospects materially, as well as offsetting from a speculative standpoint, the low temperatures. The cold weather did cause some little apprehension, but the most of the crop has matured past danger from frost and nothing short of actually freezing temperature will do much harm now. This confidence was adde dto by the fact that most of the sold weather was in the Southwest, where the plant is nearest maturity.

Cables on corn closed ¼d lower and the statistics were bearish, which encouraged the initial selling. Prices sold down to fractional declines and during most of the session moved very sluggishly at the lower levels. The close was dull and steady, ⅜@½c lower for the day.

World's shipments of corn weer 2,925,000 bu, against 2,860,000 bu last week, and 2,845,000 bu a year ago. Corn on ocean passage increased 1,520,000 bu and now amounts to 12,137,000 bu.

The cash demand for corn was slow and prices ruled easier.

Primary receipts of corn were 416,712 bu, with shipments of 470,477 bu, and local receipts were 135,550 bu, with shipments of 30,140 bu.

Seaboard clearances of corn for the day weer 330 bu.

The visible supply of corn increased 614,000 bu and now amount sto 3,520,000 bu, compared with a decrease of 362,000 bu, with 3,769,000 bu in sight at the same time last year.

Oats were dull and ruled easier in sympathy with corn, closing ⅜c to ⅝c lower. Cash oats weer easy. The visible suppy of oats increased 751,000 bu. Oats clearnnces were 5000 bu.

Primary receipts of corn were 1,033,671 bu, with shipments of 477,760 bu, and local receipts were 233,600 bu, with shipments of 85,860 bu.

LATEST LIVESTOCK NEWS.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., Sept. 28.—Estimated receipts today compare with a week and a year ago as follows:

	Today.	Week ago.	Year ago.
Cattle	5,500	7,700	8,600
Hogs	3,500	6,500	4,800
Sheep	800	1,400	4,700
Horses and mules	500	2,200	1,000

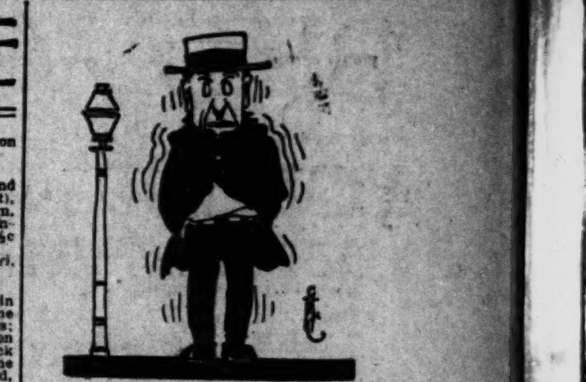

NATIVE CATTLE—A few good to choice steers, from $6.50 to $7.25 were included in the 2500 natives received, and, although there was a fair number of fsteers, but few Westerns arrived, most of the offerings being medium to fair natives, selling from $4.50 to $5.50. Trade was fairly active and early sales at full steady prices.

Some good lots of fed butcher cattle were included in the moderate supply on offer, as well as the usual proportion of common and fair grades. Cows and heifers sold steady to strong and calves about a quarter higher. Good heifers sold at $5.50, cows at $4, bulls at $3.25 and veal calves at $7.

There was but little outside inquiry for stockers and feeders today, but the few here sold mostly through local dealers brought steady values.

SOUTHERN CATTLE—Around 3000 head arrived, but the quality was hardly as good as the past several days. There was good movement, with steers selling a dime higher, she stuff and mixed lots at strong prices, and calves a shade higher.

Among the day's sales were Texas and Oklahoma steers at $3.50@3.85, cows at $2.25@2.25, bulls at $2.50@2.90, calves at $3@6, Mississippi steers at $3@3.50, oxen at $2.85, Arkansas cows, heifers and mixed lots at $2.25@3.10 and Tennessee mixed at $2.60@3.

WHY NOT WOMAN FOR PRESIDENT? ASKS ZANGWILL

Novelist and Dramatist Declares for "Human Suffrage," Not Woman Suffrage.

OUR IDEA IS BARBARIC

Queens Have Shown Capacity for Governing Equal to That of Kings.

By NIXOLA GREELEY-SMITH

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—"Why should there not be a woman president of the United States?"

It was not a militant suffragette who asked the question, but Israel Zangwill, one of England's foremost novelists and dramatists, now in New York to superintend the production of his new play of New York life, "The Melting Pot." Mr. Zangwill was limp from a long rehearsal and the sultriness of a day that made him admit our sovereign city is a "melting pot" in reality as well as in the fusion of races, which makes the theme of his play.

It was over the cups of a belated tea at the hotel Wellington that this foremost son of Zion proclaimed his advocacy of woman suffarge, while his remarkably pretty and charming wife smiled and nodded her approval, occasionally contributing a cogent argument for the cause. I had no sooner seen Mr. Zangwill than I decided the unwritten law would entitle him to kill every photographer that has ever attempted to make a portrait of him. He is infinitely better looking than any published likeness, and his manner is of a much deep reading gentleness.

"It might very well happen," he continued, "that a woman should arise so skilled in government, so adept in diplomacy that she would make a better president than any man you had. Under such circumstances why should not men vote for her? If the idea seems startling to Americans, it merely proves that there survives among you the spirit of the barbarous Salic law which, as you know, forbade woman to reign. In this respect the so-called 'reactionary' countries of Europe are far ahead of you. They have queens, and have had them for centuries.

"Queen Elizabeth is said to have had a wonderful talent for statesmanship. Queen Victoria showed by her letters that she had far more to do with ruling England than was generally believed.

Presidency a Responsibility.

"I would not regard the presidency as an honor to be conferred on a woman. It is not an honor for anyone, but a responsibility. If a lot of people believe themselves lost at sea, and elect one of their number captain because they think him the best fitted to steer them to safety, the yare not granting him a privilege, but putting a responsibility upon him.'

"But do you believe men ever admit that a woman was more capable of governing than a man?"

"Not today," conceded Mr. Zangwill, "but eventually, yes. Woman suffrage must come very soon in England, and as soon as England proves its practicability the rest of the world will follow. England, you know, started the fashion in constitutions. Now even Turkey and Persia insist upon having them."

"You spoke of responsibility," I interrupted, "It is because the majority of women in this country dislike responsibility and they reject woman suffrage. They claim that woman is above politics"—

"Politics is life," Mr. Zangwill epigrammatized. "They might as well say woman is above life."

"How is it the working women in America are apparently unaware of the disadvantages of not having the vote? In England over 200,000 organized women textile workers form part of the movement to obtain woman suffrage. They want a voice in Parliament to express their ideas."

"Only recently a bill was introduced to make it unlawful for a mother to sleep in the same bed with her baby. Think of a lot of men legislating on a question like that."

Mr. Zangwill laughed merrily at the idea and just then the waiter came in with the tea things.

"Human," not "Woman" Suffrage.

"Why do you bring three portions of butter to two portions of rolls?" Mr. Zangwill asked him, and then, fairly appalled at the perfect mountain of French rolls before him, bade the waiter remove half of them.

When the offending rolls had disappeared and we were settled comfortably over our tea Mr. Zangwill said:

"I think I've exhausted what I have to say on woman suffrage, though I don't think it should be called woman suffrage. Human suffrage would be a much better term. What has the accident of sex to do with the question?"

"I was reading the other day an article by an Englishman which conceded the equality of woman's intellect with man's," I said, "as well as her right to political power, but the author said if she insisted on a general recognition of these facts by man she would be reduced in his eyes to the level of a physiological necessity."

"That is untrue," replied Mr. Zangwill. "A man forms a sincere friendship with another man, yet physiologically they are nothing to each other. And if the fact of her sex could be suspended for a time men would still seek the society of certain women, because they found them charming, stimulating." Mr. Zangwill leaned back in his chair, sipping his tea reflectively.

"The strangest thing in the world," he said, suddenly deserting the suffragettes, "is the dearth of great personalities. Think how few there are. Roosevelt is one of them. I don't approve of everything he does, but I admire his dynamic force. I hear your Wall street men claim he brought on the panic—just because he tried to make them honest.

"And the other great personalities. Tolstoy is one, in my opinion; President Diaz of Mexico, so far as I know anything of him, is another; Winston Churchill, in England, perhaps. Those are all I can think of."

"There is an article in one of our current magazines," I said, "on 'The Greatest Man in the History of the World.' The author meant Napoleon Bonaparte, but whom would you select for that title?"

"In his influence on men, unquestionably Jesus," replied the Jewish author. And then, as I rose to go, he said, curiously, "You're the only person that ever interviewed me that didn't take notes." Then he laughed, and before I had found safety in the elevator, "No notes for women—votes for women," he called.
